By His Excellency's command,

Colombo, November 13, 1916. Colonial Secretary.

Statement of Objects and Reasons.

THE object of this Ordinance is to effect a number of amendments of a minor nature in "The Housing and Town Improvement Ordinance, No. 19 of 1915."

2. Some of these are corrections of clerical errors, others give effect to certain suggestions on points of detail which had been made by the Local Government Board (to whom the Ordinance was submitted by the Secretary of State), with a view to carrying out the principles of the Ordinance.

3. Few of these amendments require any special explanation. Attention may be called to the amendments of section 97 and of rule 3 (a) of the Schedule.

4. With regard to section 97, the Board point out that in considering overcrowding, it is necessary to bear in mind that, though a room may have a certain cubical content, the whole of that cubical content may not be available for the occupants. It is necessary to provide, therefore, for "free air space," and this has been effected by a verbal amendment of the section.

5. With regard to rule 3 (a) of the Schedule, the Board point out that the provision for an average height will not be effective, unless there is at the same time a provision insisting on a minimum height in all places.

6. An amendment of section 78 may also be noticed. It is pointed out by the Board that there may be a difficulty in making demolition orders in regard to single rooms. To obviate this difficulty, it is provided that the provisions of the section shall be optional instead of imperative.

7. Certain other amendments, not suggested by the Local Government Board, also require notice—

(a) Section 18.—As the section stands, a property owner on a private street less than 20 feet wide cannot build on the street, unless the local authority lays down street lines under sub-section (4). The local authority will not do this in respect of private streets, as by so doing it will subject itself to liability to compensation in respect of any building which, on re-erection, is required to be set back to the prescribed street line. There is no reason why the local authority should spend public money for the purpose of improving private streets, and consequently the power of property owners in these narrow private streets of developing their properties by building remains permanently blocked. It is accordingly proposed that the compensation provisions shall apply only to public streets.

(b) A further point arises on this section. Where street lines are laid down for existing streets, the standards of width prescribed by the schedule can only be relaxed in cases where the street is "wholly or mainly" developed by buildings. It is proposed to give the local authority a somewhat greater latitude by substituting the words "to a substantial extent."

(c) A third point also arises in connection with the same subject. Section 25 (8) provides that the local authority, before it consents to declare a street to be a public street, may insist upon its being widened, but does not provide any means by which this widening may be carried out. An amendment is accordingly proposed, which provides that the widening may be carried out on the application of the owners of premises representing not less than two-thirds of the frontages affected, and that the expenses of such widening and of the provision of proper access to the street may be included in an apportionment made under that section.

(d) Section 48 (Street Widening Scheme).—This form of scheme provides for the inclusion in the street of strips of the abutting properties, on the terms that compensation is paid for buildings and trees only, and that the authority framing the scheme replaces all boundary walls and hedges, and undertakes the making of the street. The section, however, provides for the "dedication" of the included strips by the owners, and as "dedication" is an act which there is no machinery to enforce, this in effect means that the scheme could not be put into operation unless every owner consented to it. This was not the intention. The section is accordingly amended by the substitution of the word "inclusion" for the word "dedication."

Attorney-General.
