NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following Specification has been accepted:—

No. 1,963 of December 19, 1922.

Frederick Albert Cox & Moses Joseph.

"Method of cutting bamboo and like woods into splints and apparatus therefor."

Abstract.—The applicants describe a method of carrying out their invention in which the internodes of the bamboo are split into convenient widths by hand and are then fed lengthwise between a pair of rollers having longitudinal grooves. The rollers push the bamboos between a pair of thicknessing knives which reduce them to the required degree of thickness. The material then passes between a pair of rolls provided with circumferential grooves, the grooves on one roller being opposite the projections in the other: here the bamboo is split to the required width and then passes to a pair of rolls with longitudinal knife edge which cut the strips to the required length.

The claims are:—

1. The method of splitting bamboo and like woods into desired widths by means of a pair of rollers having encircling grooves, the rollers being arranged that the projections on one enter the grooves in the other.
2. Means for splitting bamboo and like woods into desired widths consisting of a pair of rollers having encircling grooves, the rollers being arranged that the projections on one enter the grooves in the other.
3. In splitting rollers such as secondly claimed, arranging the grooving in belts alternated with ungrooved belts, whether the belts having grooving of the same width or some or all have different widths of grooving, and whether or not the rollers be in the changeable with rollers having different widths of grooving.

4. In mechanism for converting bamboo and like woods into splints, thickening blades, with means for feeding the material thereto, in combination with splitting rollers such as secondly or thirdly claimed.
5. Means for converting bamboo and like woods into splints consisting of a pair of feeding rollers, thickening blades, a pair of groove encircled splitting rollers and a pair of cutting rollers.
6. Mechanism for converting bamboo and like woods into splints substantially as described and/or illustrated.
