WITH reference to the Notification dated March 7, 1923, and published in the Gazette dated March 9, 1923, the following particulars in regard to the treasury bills by means of which the Liquidating Commission of the Portuguese Transportes Maritimos do Estado propose to pay the creditors of that concern are published for general information. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is, however, unable to accept responsibility for the accuracy of the information.

2. The bills which are issued in Portuguese currency bear interest at six per cent., and are said to be easily discounted or renewed. The number already issued is not known, but there has so far been no default in connection with the bills or the payments of interest.

3. His Majesty's Minister at Lisbon understands from a remark made to him by an official in the Portuguese Ministry for Foreign Affairs, that the claims of creditors who refuse to accept this form of payment could not be settled by other means until the Portuguese Government provide the Liquidating Commission with the necessary funds in sterling—an eventuality which in the present state of Portuguese finances, the Secretary of State can only regard as remote.

or at such a premium, or with such deferred rights as compared with any shares previously issued or then about to be issued, or subject to any such conditions or provisions, and with any such right or without any right of voting, and generally on such terms as the Company may from time to time by special resolution determine.

56. Modification of Rights and Consent.—If at any time by the issue of preference shares or otherwise the Capital is divided into shares of different classes, then the holders of any class of shares may, by an extraordinary resolution passed at a meeting of such holders consent, on behalf of all the holders of shares of that class, to the issue or creation of any shares ranking equally therewith, or having any priority thereto, or to the abandonment of any preference or priority, or of any accrued dividend, or the reduction for any time or permanently of the dividends payable thereon, or to any scheme for the reduction of the Company's capital affecting that class of shares: and such resolution shall be binding upon all the holders of shares of that class, provided that this Article shall not be read as implying the necessity for such consent in any case in which, but for this Article, the object of the resolutions could have been effected without it.

57. Meetings affecting a particular Class of Shares.—Any meeting for the purpose of the last preceding clause shall be convened and conducted in all respects as nearly as possible in the same way as an Extraordinary General Meeting of the Company, provided that no Shareholder, not being a Director, shall be entitled to notice thereof or to attend thereat, unless he be a holder of shares of the class intended to be affected by the resolution, and that no vote shall be given except in respect of a share of that class, and that at any such meeting a poll may be demanded in writing by any Shareholders personally present and entitled to vote at the meeting.

CALLS.

58. Directors may make Calls.—The Directors may from time to time make such calls as they think fit upon the registered holders of shares in respect of moneys unpaid thereon, and not by the conditions of allotment made payable at fixed times; and each Shareholder shall pay the amount of every call so made on him to the persons and at the times and places appointed by the Directors, provided that one month's notice at least shall be given to the Shareholder of the time and place appointed for payment of each call.

61. Interest on Unpaid Call.—If the sum payable in respect of any call or instalment is not paid on or before the day appointed for the payment thereof, the holder for the time being of the share in respect of which the call shall have been made, or the instalments shall have become due, shall pay interest for the same at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum from the day appointed for the payment thereof to the time of the actual payment, but the Directors may, when they think fit, remit altogether or in part any sum payable as interest under the clause.

62. Payments in Anticipation of Calls.—The Directors may, at their discretion, receive from any Shareholder willing to advance the same, and upon such terms as they think fit, all or any part of the amount due on his shares beyond the sum actually called up.

With the sanction of a General Meeting the Directors shall be entitled to borrow such further sum or sums and at such rates of interest as such meeting shall determine. The Directors may, for the purpose of securing the re-payment of any such sum or sums of money so borrowed or raised, create and issue any mortgages, debentures, mortgage debentures, debenture stock, bonds, or obligation of the Company, charged upon all or any part of the undertaking, revenue, property, and rights and assets of the Company (both present and future) including uncalled capital or unpaid calls, or give, accept, or endorse on behalf of the Company any promissory notes or bills of exchange. Provided also that before the Directors execute any mortgage, issue any debentures, or create any debenture stock, they shall obtain the sanction thereto of the Company in General Meeting, whether Ordinary or Extraordinary, notice of the intention to obtain such sanction at such meeting having been duly given. Any such securities may be issued at par or at a premium or discount, and may from time to time be cancelled or discharged, varied, or exchanged, as the Directors may think fit, and may contain any special privileges as to redemption, surrender, drawings, allotment of shares, or otherwise. Every debenture or other instrument issued by the Company for securing the payment of money may be so framed that the moneys thereby secured shall be assignable free from any equities between the Company and the person to whom the same may be issued. A declaration under the Company's seal contained in or endorsed upon any of the documents mentioned in this Article and subscribed to by two or more of the Directors, or by one Director and the Secretary, to the effect that the Directors have power to borrow the amount which such document may represent, shall be conclusive evidence thereof in all questions between the Company and its creditors, and no such document containing such declaration shall, as regards the creditor, be void on the ground of its being granted in excess of the aforesaid borrowing power, unless it shall be proved that such creditor was aware that it was so granted.

NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following Specification has been accepted:—

No. 1,971 of February 16, 1923.

Mc. Leröth Pneumatic Tyre Syndicate, Limited.

"Improvements in or relating to air tubes for Pneumatic Tyres."

Abstract.—The invention relates to air tubes for pneumatic tyres of the kind comprising a plurality of sections or compartments arranged with the object of preventing the puncturing of one section from materially affecting the efficiency of the tyre as a whole, and in particular relates to the stud communicating between the feed tube and the sections. This stud consists of two main parts, one of which comprising the head and neck through with an axial air passage passes is situated inside the section, while the connected base with a transverse air passage is situated on the outside of the section and in the feed tube.

The claims are:—

1. A stud for use in an air tube for pneumatic tyres, of the kind hereinbefore set forth, constituted by two main portions, one, with a substantially axial passage there through and comprising a head and neck, and the other, a base formed with a passage or passages arranged transversely thereof so as to communicate with the passage through the other portion and so as to debouch at or near the periphery of said base portion, said base portion being adapted to be secured to the neck of the other portion.

2. A stud, as claimed in claim 1, built up from a tapered cup, a tubular neck, and a base portion having a passage or passages debouching at its periphery, substantially as set forth.
 3. A stud, as claimed in claim 2, wherein an apertured disc and a flared mouth of the neck are disposed in the mouth of the tapered cup, the marginal portion of which is then beaded over, substantially as set forth.
 4. A stud, as claimed in claim 2 or in claim 3, whereof the base portion is substantially concavo-convex and wherein the free end of the neck portion having been passed through an aperture in said base is expanded there over or otherwise secured thereto, substantially as set forth.
 5. A stud, as claimed in claim 4, wherein the base portion is formed with a beaded or recurved edge flattened at angular intervals to form transverse passages, substantially as set forth.
 6. The method of placing in position in an air tube of the kind hereinbefore set forth, a stud as claimed in any of the preceding claims, which consists in forcing the head of the stud into raw rubber valveless feed tube so that the end overlaps the junction of the head and neck, partially vulcanizing said feed tube, inserting the neck of the stud through an aperture in a piece of raw rubber and then placing the base portion on and securing it to the neck portion, substantially as herein before set forth.
 7. In an air tube of the kind hereinbefore set forth, securing the free end of the valveless rubber feed tube to the central part of the adjacent diaphragm, substantially as and for the purpose set forth.
 8. For use in an air tube of the kind hereinbefore set forth, a stud constructed and arranged, substantially in the manner described.
 9. For use in air tube of the kind hereinbefore set forth, a stud constructed and arranged, substantially as described with reference to the accompanying drawings.

“Improvements in continuous wave telephony and telegraphy.”

Abstract.—In a system of wireless telephony, &c., in which each station employs only one aerial and can send or receive without using a change-over switch, both stations transmit continuous waves all the time. The two waves are of different lengths and beat with a supersonic frequency. Coupled to each aerial or transmitting circuit through a rectifier is a circuit tuned to the beat frequency, and signals are heard in this circuit only when one or other of the transmitted waves is being modulated. Duplex and multiplex telegraphy may be effected by modulating with different tones and employing additional tone tuning circuits. In an example a valve maintains continuous oscillations, which may be modulated in any known way, in the aerial. An induction, which may form part of a circuit tuned to the transmitted or received wave, is coupled to the transmitter and connected through a rectifier and a condenser shunted by a potentiometer, to the circuit tuned to the beat frequency, and to which the receiver is connected. In operation, the large steady current induced in the inductance is reduced by means of the potentiometer. In a modification, a three-electrode rectifier is used with a small condenser shunted by a high resistance in its grid circuit. The system is particularly suitable for use with very short waves, and may be used for high-frequency signalling over line wires.

The claims are :—

1. A system of wireless telephony or telegraphy, comprising two stations working on different wave lengths so as to produce beats between the waves of the two stations with a receiving circuit at each station tuned to the beat frequency and coupled to the transmitting system through a rectifier so that no reception takes place, unless the transmitter is working at normal power.
 2. A system of wireless telephony or telegraphy, comprising two stations working on different wave lengths so as to produce beats between the waves of the two stations with a receiver at each station, which contains a circuit tuned to the beat frequency and coupled to the transmitting aerial, so that transmission and reception are done on one and the same aerial.
 3. Wireless telephone and telegraph systems, substantially as described with reference to the drawings.

“Improvements in or relating to air cushions or seats.”

Abstract.—The applicant describes a form of air cushion or seat characterized by being made of rubber or other suitable material, and being provided with ties between opposite internal faces to prevent deformation on inflation. When desired the cushions are adapted to fit in frames which are reversible.

The claims are :—

1. Cushions for use in seats, settees, couches, beds or the like, comprising an inflatable bag (or bags) of india-rubber or other suitable material made to the desired size and shape, and provided with means, such as an outer non-extensible but compressible frame, or/and a number of inner tie members for limiting the expansion of the bag (or bags) and rendering the elasticity of the cushion uniform under compression.
2. In air or like cushions and means for limiting their expansion as claimed in claim 1, an india-rubber or like bag made to the required size and shape of cushion and provided interiorly with a number of tie members connecting the upper and lower or opposite walls of the bag one to another, and with, or without, a non-extensible web near one edge, substantially as herein set forth.
3. In air or like cushions and means for limiting their expansion as claimed in claim 1, an india-rubber or like bag made to the desired size and shape of cushion, in combination with an outer non-extensible skeleton frame, adapted to enclose the cushion and prevent its undue expansion while allowing of compression, substantially as herein set forth.
4. In air or like cushions and means for limiting their expansion as claimed in claim 1, an india-rubber or like bag made to the desired size and shape of cushion, in combination with an outer non-extensible skeleton frame, adapted to enclose the cushion and prevent its undue expansion while allowing of compression, said frame comprising a lower lattice-like part, which, on the seat being reversed, can be used as an ordinary spring seat, substantially as herein set forth.
5. In air or like cushions and means for limiting their expansion as claimed in claim 1, an india-rubber or like bag made to the required size and shape of cushion and provided interiorly with a number of tubular tie members arranged at suitable distances apart, elastic rings or elastic loop-ended cords or the like passing through said tie members and through eyelet holes in said cover, and buttons with hooks, or rods or wires, engaging said rings or cords, the contraction of the rings or cords holding the buttons firmly against the cover and the cover against the cushion or any intermediate packing, substantially as herein set forth.

6. In air or like cushions or seats as claimed in the preceding claims, the combination with the improved rubber bag having tubular tie members, of a woven wire frame, on which the cushion lies, and an outer jacket or cover enclosing the cushion and frame, said cover having eyelet holes top and bottom corresponding to the tie members in number and position, and also having slots near each lower corner, and straps engaging the frame and passing through said slots, substantially as and for the purposes herein set forth.

7. In seats, settees, couches, beds and the like including seat backs or "squabs," the construction, arrangement, and combination of parts, substantially as herein described with reference to the accompanying drawings.

"Improvements in apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like."

Abstract.—The applicants describe a form of dryer in which the material to be dried is placed in trays which descend vertically through the dryer. The drying gas enters at the bottom of the machine, passes through a port at one end of the bottom tray, across the top of the material in that tray and so up through the port in the second tray. The trays are caused to move downwards in the following way: each tray is provided with zig-zag slots at each end on both sides; pins mounted in a slidable guided frame engage with the slots on the third tray from the bottom; if either of the two bottom trays be removed and the lever be operated, the studs move along the slots in the third tray and allow it together with the superincumbent trays to fall one step; a fresh tray can then be inserted at the top.

The claims are:—

1. In apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like of the type characterized by trays containing the material to be dried placed in a chamber through which heated air is caused to circulate, means for shifting intermittently downwards the said trays comprising zig-zag grooves or slots provided in the sides of the said trays, with which said grooves in one of the trays, preferably the third from the bottom, pins or studs or the like, mounted in a slidable guided frame mounted at both sides of the chamber, are made to engage and disengage, so that when the said frame is operated with a single reciprocating movement, each and all of the superposed nest of trays is lowered by the depth of one such tray, freeing thereby the lowermost of those lowered trays for withdrawal from the chamber and providing a space for the admission of a fresh tray at the top of the said nest of trays, and means for directing the flow of heated air through the said chamber, comprising a port at one end of each of the said trays.

2. In apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like of the type afore-described, trays provided with zig-zag grooves or slots on both sides and near each end of them with which pins or studs, mounted in a slidable guided frame mounted on both sides of the chamber, engage or disengage for the purpose afore-described in claim 1.

3. In apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like of the type afore-described, a slidable guided reciprocating frame on each side of the chamber carrying pins or studs that engage and disengage at each single reciprocating movement of the said frame, with the zig-zag grooves or slots in the sides of the trays claimed in claim 2 for the purpose afore-described in claim 1.

4. In apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like of the type afore-described, trays provided with a port at one end for the purpose afore-described in claim 1.

5. Improved apparatus for drying materials and vegetable products and the like, comprising vertically shifted trays operated by the means claimed in the preceding claims 1 and 2 and 3, each tray being provided with a port as claimed in claim 4.
