NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following Specifications have been accepted:—

No. 1,852 of August 22, 1921.

Henri Vincent Adam.

An improved method of and apparatus for disintegrating, dividing, or similarly treating sugar cane and the like.

Abstract.—The applicant describes an improved machine for disintegrating sugar cane. In one form of the machine the stalks are held in a holder which reciprocates transversely across a table; through the base of the table project two rotating drums with cutters attached: these drums rotate in opposite directions and subject the cane to a milling action, thereby disintegrating it in an even manner with the avoidance of jerks.

The claims are:—

1. A method for disintegrating or dividing sugar cane, characterized by this, that the cane is exposed to the action of a rotating cutting tool having one or more knife edges at its circumference.
 2. In a machine for carrying into effect the method as claimed in claim 1, a rotary cutting tool projecting through a slot in the work table, a holder for the material to be cut and means for moving the tool and the holder with respect to one another in substantially parallel relation with the table.
 3. In a machine as claimed in claim 1, a cylindrical table and a holder adapted for oscillatory motion about a fixed axis.
 4. In a machine as claimed in claim 2, a plurality of tools adapted for rotary motion either in the same or in opposite directions.
 5. The improved apparatus arranged, constructed and operating substantially as described with reference to the accompanying drawing.

Improvements in and relating to filters and the like.

Abstract.—The applicant describes an improved filter suitable for use with sugar solutions. One form of the filter consists of a bag of filter cloth open at the bottom as well as the top and secured at each end to nozzles and with a valve at the lower end: when the filter becomes clogged with dirt, a reverse current of water or steam can be passed through the bag, and the dirt removed through the bottom valve, vacuum being applied if desired. In other forms, two filter bags are provided, one within the other, and connected or not connected at the lower end; the solution being fed between the bags can then pass out of the outer bag or into the inner one, thus giving a larger filtering area while retaining the feature of the ease of removal of dirt; the bags may be reinforced to make them rigid when necessary.

The claims are:—

1. Taylor or pocket filter having its pocket (s) at its (their) bottom end open and secured to a nozzle.
 2. In a filter as claimed in claim 1, a valve member adapted to close the lower nozzle.
 3. In a filter as claimed in claim 1, a second pocket inside the first named one, said second pocket having a smaller diameter, being closed at its top end and provided with a reinforcement for resisting the pressure of the liquid, to be filtered, both pockets having their bottom portions secured to a common nozzle.
 4. Improvement in a filter as claimed in claim 3, consisting in that the outer and the inner pocket are secured to individual nozzles.
 5. In a filter as claimed in claim 3 or 4, the provision inside the inner pocket of a strengthening tube which at its bottom is secured to or integral with the lower nozzle.
 6. In a filter as claimed in claim 3 or 4, the provision of a valve member for the closure of the lower nozzle of the inner pocket.
 7. The improved apparatus arranged, constructed and operating substantially as described with reference to the accompanying drawing.

Blocks composed of caoutchouc and other materials.

Abstract.—The applicant describes a method of making blocks of rubber compounded with other materials, in which these materials, such as sand or woody matter to which are added rubber compounding ingredients such as zinc oxide and the whole mixed with rubber latex. The blocks are shaped and can then be vulcanized. Rubber can be attached to the surface of the blocks.

The claims are :—

1. The manufacture of blocks or slabs of any shape or size substantially as hereinbefore described which can be used for building purposes, roofing tiles, &c.

2. The manufacture of a material substantially as described to which rubber can be vulcanized so as to be firmly united and thus used for paving of roads and general purposes in which a rubber surface firmly united to the basic material is required substantially as described.

3. As new articles of manufacture blocks composed of caoutchouc and other materials when prepared or produced by the process hereinbefore described and claimed.

Improvements in or relating to the preservation and preparation for transportation of oil-bearing raw material, such as nuts, seeds, and copra.

Abstract.—The applicant describes a method of preparing oil-bearing raw material for transport, in which quantities of the material are compressed in bulk, the pressure applied being insufficient to express any oil. Air is excluded, decomposition and fire risk are decreased, and a material of greater density is obtained.

The claims are :—

1. A method of preparation for transport and/or preservation of oil-bearing raw material, such as nuts, seeds, or copra, which consists in compressing quantities of said material in bulk, under a pressure insufficient to express any appreciable quantity of the contained oil, but sufficient to form a package of greatly reduced bulk.

2. A method according to claim 1, wherein the pressure employed is insufficient to express any of the contained oil, but sufficient to form the material into a coherent block.

3. A method according to claim 1 or claim 2, as applied to nuts or seeds, wherein the nuts or seeds are compressed while within their shells or castings, for the purpose described.

4. A method according to claim 1, claim 2, or claim 3, wherein the oil-bearing material is enclosed in jute or like material, substantially as described.

5. A method of preparation for transport and/or preservation of cotton seeds which consists in compressing quantities of said seeds in bulk, under a pressure in the region of two tons per square inch on the block, whereby the seeds are formed into a coherent block without expression of any appreciable quantity of the contained oil.

6. The method of preparation for transport and/or preservation of oil-bearing raw material of the type specified, substantially as herein described.

7. As a new product, a block or package of oil-bearing raw material of the type specified, prepared in the manner set for in any of the foregoing claims.

Improvements in the preparation of pure raw sheet and/or crepe rubber intended to have one surface smooth and the other rough.

Abstract.—The applicant states that raw sheet rubber having one surface smooth and the other rough cannot be produced satisfactorily by rolling with a smooth roll and a crepe roll mounted in the same housing. He obtains the desired result by compounding a crepe sheet with a smooth sheet by heating one or both to a temperature of approximately 200° F. and pressing them together.

The claims are :—

1. In the preparation of pure raw sheet and/or crepe rubber intended to have one surface smooth and the other rough, compounding into one sheet a smooth and a crepe sheet under heat and pressure.

2. In the preparation of pure raw sheet and/or crepe rubber intended to have one surface smooth and the other rough, superposing a smooth sheet and a crepe sheet one or both of them being hot and subjecting them to pressure.

Abstract.—The nature of the invention is described in the claim as follows :—

In machines for cutting rubber or similar material the use of plain discs or cylinders attached to circular rotary shears in such a manner that rubber or similar material to be cut is gripped, guided, and drawn by the discs or cylinders past the rotary shears and cut by them.
