10. The successful tenderer will be required to execute a purchase agreement wherein the conditions enumerated in this notice will be embodied, but, before execution of the agreement, the purchaser will be required to deposit as cash security 10 per cent. of the tendered amount for efficient and punctual fulfilment of the agreement.

Payment of the purchase amount will ordinarily be required to be made in full immediately on acceptance of the tender, and if, however, the successful purchaser is desirous of paying the amount by instalments, he will be allowed to pay in three equal instalments, the first instalment being paid immediately on acceptance of the tender and the other two instalments at the end of one and two months respectively from the date of first payment.

2. If payment is made by instalments, the purchaser will be allowed, on payment of each instalment, to cut and remove one-third of the total number of trees in respect of which the agreement is concluded, provided, however, the quantity to be so cut and removed should represent the value of each instalment paid.

3. The purchaser shall commence work only on issue of a felling permit duly signed by the Range Forest Officer, Vavuniya. Felling should proceed systematically in one

5. If, however, it is found that the purchaser has been actually unable to remove all his material by the expiry date, due to circumstances beyond his control, then and in that case only, the question of extending the duration of the agreement with or without the usual extension fees shall entirely rest with the Conservator of Forests, to whom the Divisional Forest Officer shall make his due recommendation.

6. The purchaser shall either exercise such personal supervision as will ensure the conditions of this agreement being efficiently carried out, or employ an efficient supervisor whose name shall be furnished in writing and approved of by the Divisional Forest Officer.

7. The purchaser shall agree that, for each and every infringement of the conditions laid down herein, he shall become liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 to be imposed by the Divisional Forest Officer, at his discretion, and to be recovered from the cash security deposited or in any other manner whatsoever. Provided, however, that in the event of the purchaser committing any act which infringes any section of the Forest Ordinance, the Divisional Forest Officer, may at his discretion, take action under such section and claim compensation thereunder or a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 as described above, whichever is greater.

8. Should the purchaser fail to pay any instalment when due, the agreement is liable to cancellation as from the date of such default with forfeiture of the cash security, and the purchaser shall not be entitled to any compensation in such an event.

NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following Specifications have been accepted :—

No. 2,446 of January 27, 1930.

Jonni Zetsche and James Sinclair-Ross.

Improvements in electric motors.

Abstract.—The windings as a whole are adapted for connection to the maximum distribution voltage and the stator and rotor coils form two mutually complementary magnetic circuits of the horseshoe type. The grouping of the coils can be changed by a switch so that the motor works as a two-pole, four-pole, series-wound, shunt-wound, or compound wound machine.

The claims are :—

1. An improved construction of electric motors of the kind above referred to adapted to be operated either by alternating or direct current for driving machinery of all kinds and with the rotor and stator consisting of separate coils, characterized hereby, that the windings as a whole are adapted for connection to the maximum distribution voltage ordinarily met with and the stator and rotor coils are arranged to form two mutually complementary magnetic circuits of the horseshoe type, the motor being adapted for connection to any lower supply voltage, or to run at various speeds with a given supply voltage, simply by changing the grouping of the separate coils without requiring any series resistance, so that the motor works for example as a two-pole, four-pole, series-wound, shunt-wound, or compound-wound machine and with alternating current can be run as a repulsion motor.

2. An electric motor construction according to claim 1, characterized hereby, that the iron cores of the stator and rotor coils respectively are connected at the ends adjacent to one another by closed pole rings (6, 17) of iron.

3. An electric motor constructed according to claims 1 and 2, characterized hereby, that the field coils are arranged upon an iron base plate, the rotor coils are mounted upon, and so as to depend downwardly from, an iron disc arranged parallel to the said base plate and carried by a vertical spindle preferably supported rotatably on the base plate, a closed iron ring interconnects the upper ends of the field cores, and another closed iron ring interconnects the lower depending ends of the rotor cores, the rotor ring being arranged to rotate in close proximity to the field ring by the interaction of the two sets of magnetic poles produced on the field and rotor rings respectively, the speed of rotation depending upon the number and grouping of the field and rotor coils.

4. An electric motor constructed according to claims 1 to 3, characterized hereby, that the field and rotor rings (5 and 17) are formed with adjacent vertical surfaces (7 and 18) with as small an air gap as possible between the said surfaces.

5. The improved construction of electric motors according to claims 1 to 4, arranged, and operating, substantially as described with reference to the accompanying drawing.

No. 2,447 of January 30, 1930 (Date applied for under Section 50 of the Ordinance: February 25, 1929).

Jonvi Zetsche and James Sinclair-Ross.

Improvements in electric motors.

Abstract.—The rotor consists of two or more series of coils or cores arranged near one another on discs of nonmagnetic material arranged to rotate between two sets of stator coils and cores so that the rotor cores are magnetically intermediate and complementary to the stator cores.

The claims are:—

1. An improved electric motor of the kind referred to hereby characterized, that the rotor consists of two or more series of coils and cores arranged adjacent one another upon one or more discs of nonmagnetic material arranged to rotate between two sets of stator coils and cores so that the rotor cores are magnetically intermediate and complementary to the stator cores in the magnetic circuit.

2. Electric motor according to claim 1, hereby characterized that the ends of each set of the stator cores adjacent the rotor are interconnected by a separate closed iron ring, while the outer ends of each series of rotor cores adjacent to the respective sets of stator cores are also interconnected by a separate closed iron ring, the two rotor rings being arranged to rotate in close proximity to the corresponding stator rings.

3. The improved electric motor according to claims 1 and 2, constructed, arranged, and operating, substantially as described with reference to the accompanying drawing.

One sheet of drawings.
