"Process and apparatus for the mechanical treatment of coagulated substances preparatory to drying and transporting them."

Abstract.—The invention comprises a method and apparatus intended to produce the rubber or other similar substance in the form of cylinders in order to facilitate the transport and handling. The object of the cylindrical shape is so that the substance may subsequently be cut by a special machine into very long thin strips instead of having to handle the material in small sheets.

The apparatus consists of a special form of mould into which the liquid is poured and allowed to coagulate. To obtain the sheet subsequently a cutting tool (with a suitable arrangement of rollers to make the requisite thickness of sheet) is used to peel off the material from the outside of the cylinder.

There are ten claims and two sheets of drawings.

The Asiatic Petroleum Company, Limited.

"Improved telescopic spout for tins or like containers."

Abstract.—The invention comprises a new type of telescopic spout which has none of the disadvantages of the types at present used. "An improved anti-glare method for use on motor vehicles."

Abstract.—The invention comprises the mounting of a conventionally designed head lamp on the off side rear of all vehicles at the level of the rear bumper.

The manipulation of the lamp will be controlled by the driver. As two cars approach each other, the drivers dim their head lights and by switching on the lamp at the rear of their own car illuminate the road for the other driver.
