19. Where the Governor has made an Order under section 18 (1), the person to whom that Order applies shall, after undergoing any term of imprisonment to which he may be sentenced for the offence under section 16 in consequence of which that Order was made, further undergo—

Consequences

by Governor under section 18.

- (a) a term of imprisonment equal to that portion, if any, of his term of imprisonment which remained unexpired at the time he was granted a licence to be at large; and
- (b) a term of preventive detention equal to that portion, if any, of his term of preventive detention which remained unexpired at the time of the grant of that licence.

6 Schedule C and Schedule D to the principal Ordinance are hereby repealed.

Repeal of Schedule C and Schedule D to the principal Ordinance.

Objects and Reasons.

Under section 14 of the Prevention of Crimes Ordinance, No. 2 of 1926, the Governor is empowered to grant to a prisoner serving a sentence of imprisonment or preventive detention a licence to be at large during the whole or any portion of the remainder of his sentence. If any holder of a licence is convicted of a crime, section 15 provides that his licence shall be forthwith forfeited. It sometimes happens that a prisoner at large on licence commits a crime during the currency of his licence, but is not convicted of that crime until after the date on which his licence expired. Such a prisoner is not liable in law to serve the 'remanet' of his sentence as his case does not come within the terms of section 15. There does not appear to be any good reason why such a prisoner should be relieved of the liability to undergo the 'remanet' of his sentence only because his conviction for that crime is delayed, (perhaps through his having evaded arrest), and thereby be placed in a better position than a prisoner whose conviction for a crime takes place while his licence is still in force.

2. Further, a prisoner who is convicted of a crime under section 15 and whose licence is thereby forfeited has, under section 19, to undergo the punishment he is sentenced to at the time he is convicted of that crime (which punishment may include a term of preventive detention), and thereafter to serve the portion of his sentence that remained unexpired at the time of the grant of his licence. This latter sentence may be only a term of imprisonment, with the result that after serving a period of preventive detention, during which the prisoner is subjected to reformatory influences, he has to go back to rigorous imprisonment. Any benefits achieved by the period of preventive detention are thereby apt to be lost.

3. The object of this Bill is to amend the principal Ordinance so as to remove both the defects referred to above. Clause 4 repeals section 15 and inserts a new section in its place under which a prisoner who commits a crime while he is at large on licence will be liable, on conviction of that crime, to serve the portion of his sentence that remained unexpired at the time of the grant of his licence. This liability will arise whether the conviction takes place during the currency of his licence or after his licence has expired. Clause 4 further makes it clear that the prisoner will not commence to serve any period of preventive detention to which he is liable until after he has completed his terms of imprisonment. Clause 5 of the Bill empowers the Governor to direct that a prisoner who has been convicted of an offence under section 16 committed while at large on licence shall be dealt with as if no licence had been granted to him. In this case too, it will not be material whether the conviction takes place during the currency of the licence or after the licence has expired.

4. The opportunity of the present amendment has been taken to effect some minor amendments in the principal Ordinance. Consequent on the delegation by the Governor, under the Ceylon (State Council) Order in Council, 1931, of certain of his powers under sections 14 and 18, the forms in Schedules C and D to the Ordinance are not appropriate for use in all cases where licences are issued. Clauses 2 and 3 effect amendments in sections 4 and 14 which will enable all the necessary forms to be properly prescribed by rules and which will render unnecessary an amendment of the Ordinance on any future occasion on which a change is found to be necessary in the forms. Clause 2 also substitutes for the word "convict" the more appropriate word "prisoner," as the word "convict" is used in England to mean only a person undergoing penal servitude under the English law.
