NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following Specifications have been accepted:—

No. 2,959 of April 5, 1937. (Date applied for under Section 50 of the Ordinance: December 14, 1936.)

Davidson & Company, Limited.

"Improvements in Machines for Drying Tea Leaf or the like."

Abstract.—The inventors describe an arrangement of baffles designed to prevent the flow of drying medium past the ends of the conveyors in endless chain pressure drying machines. These baffles operate in conjunction with the usual transverse baffles fixed to the cheek plates of the machine.

The baffles at the charging end are of the articulated type consisting of two hinged portions each and are attached to and move with the bearing slide blocks when the tension of the conveyor belts is being adjusted, but maintain frictional contact with the fixed baffles in so doing. At the driving end semicircular baffles operate in conjunction with swing or shaker baffles to seal off the ends of conveyors. The shaker baffles also serve to receive any leaf which may have adhered to the trays when passing over the sprockets. Provision is made for operating all the swing baffles simultaneously from the outside of the machine, so as to relieve them of the material.

The use of swing baffles and their mode of operation is disclaimed.

There are 2 claims and 5 sheets of drawings.

No. 2,961 of April 5, 1937. (Date applied for under Section 50 of the Ordinance: December 17, 1936.)

Davidson & Company, Limited.

"Improvements in machines for drying tea leaf or the like."

Abstract.—The inventors state that a rotary valve for discharging tea from the base of a drying machine suffers from the disadvantage that it induces friction between the dried leaf and valve casing. A discharge valve is also known which comprises a single valve plate on which falls the dried material from the lowest conveyor and which is periodically operated by a cam so as to discharge the material therefrom; suitable springs or counterweights are used for closing the valve plate after each discharge of leaf. In such cases the escape of drying air when the valve is open cannot be prevented.

The present application refers to a discharge device which comprises a valve box and three hinged and counter-balanced valve plates. Of the latter two open into the valve box and deliver to it the material swept out from the base of the machine and the material dropped from the lowest conveyor respectively. The third valve plate discharges the contents of the valve box to the outside. The valve plates are operated periodically in correct sequence by means of the cam mounted on the drive shaft of the lowest conveyor. No two valves are open at the same time and there is thus no loss of drying air.

There are four claims and two sheets of drawings.

No. 2,963 of April 5, 1937. (Date applied for under Section 50 of the Ordinance: December 17, 1936.)

Davidson & Company Limited.

"Improvements in Machines for Drying Tea Leaf or the like."

Abstract.—The invention relates to improvements in the means adapted for clearing the floor of a tea drying machine of material which has fallen on to it from the conveyor bands above. It is customary to provide the base of the machine with a conveyor belt with projecting blades which move over the floor and sweep the material to the discharge end.

The improvement consists in providing curved guides at one end of the conveyor belt so that the blades are tilted and in the subsequent motion over the floor the free end of the blades precede their pivotal axes. The inventors state that scraping or abrasive action on the fine material is avoided by the use of their invention.

There are five claims and one sheet of drawings.
