NOTIFICATIONS UNDER "THE PATENTS ORDINANCE, 1906."

THE following specification has been accepted :—
No. 3,204 of August 24, 1942. (Date applied for under Sec. 43, Cap. 123, October 10, 1941).

William Andell.

"Improvements in and relating to centrifugal or cyclone dust separating and similar devices".

Abstract.—The inventor states that in the usual dust separators of this kind air enters a circular head, so that after one turn it impinges on freshly arriving air. This causes undesirable eddies and pressure drop. According to his invention, the shape of the head is in the form of an involute, so that there is no interference between the two air streams. He further proposes that the dimensions of the various parts should bear certain relation to one another, and to the cubic capacity of the apparatus per minute. These relations are stated and claimed.

There are 6 claims and 1 sheet of drawings.

Registration of British Patent No. 537,132.

Revertex, Limited.

"Process for concentrating latices of rubber guttapercha, balata and the like vegetable resins."

Abstract.—The inventor states that the properties of concentrated latex such as colour, viscosity, stability, &c., vary according to the different trees which have been tapped, this difference being due to the presence of non-rubber constituents in the latex; these constituents are the proteins, resins, quebrachitol and mineral substances. The invention aims at removing all of these except the proteins of the highest molecular weight, by hydrolysis and subsequent dialysis.

According to the invention, at least 100 milli-equivalents of caustic alkali are added to each kilogramme of latex, and the mixture allowed to stand for at least two days. This treatment hydrolyses the heat coagulable proteins without however hydrolysing the heat-insensitive proteins of higher molecular weight. Subsequently the latex is dialysed for the purpose of removing the deleterious substances above mentioned, and concentrated by evaporation. Prior to evaporation a suitable amount of caustic soda or ammonia and additional stabilisers such as soaps, starches, &c., may be added.

The inventor states that evaporation can be carried to such an extent as to furnish a highly concentrated, pasty or solid product. He further claims that the concentrates have a better colour, lower viscosity, higher stability and greater uniformity than concentrates obtained by other means. Moreover, that rubber made from such concentrates exhibits superior ageing qualities owing to the absence of manganese and copper.
