GSMB Senior Director (Mines) engineer D.S. De Silva told the Daily News that a special meeting is to be held today (31) with the Disaster Management Centre on the incident and on further investigations into the matter.

De Silva said they need time to technically analyse the data collected by the preliminary investigation team on the matter.

There is no possibility that the tremor be caused by an earthquake, De Silva said. When asked as to what kind of human activity may trigger such an earth tremor, De Silva explained that, for example, such a tremor may occur due to a man-made blast or due to an internal rift in the sedimentary rock. "However, we need more time to evaluate the data to come to a conclusion. The GSMB will be sending another investigation team to the area today as well," he said.

The Meteorology Department said none of its earthquake meters had recorded the tremor. However the tremor is said to have been recorded in a tremor scale located in Pallekelle.

According to the police sources, the tremor was felt mainly in areas which are in the same ground level of Victoria reservoir including Gurdaniya, Haragama, Anuragama and Mailapitiya. According to the police, the tremor was felt for several seconds.

A police team has been deployed to probe into the matter. No persons residing in the said areas have been injured and no property damages are reported, police sources also said.

Police further said that they have informed the Disaster Management Center, Peradeniya National Building Research Organization and the Geological Surveys and Mines Bureau. Accordingly the GSMB has also deployed a team to probe into the incident.

When contacted by Daily News, Kandy Division Superintendent of Police stated that the public need not panic as it is but a minor tremor.

The cause for the tremor is yet not known. Geological Survey and Mines Bureau sources stated that the tremor could not have been caused by a natural occurrence.

When contacted by the Daily News, the controlling office of the Victoria Reservoir said that a team of engineers shall probe, if necessity arises, to see if the tremor had any effect on the reservoir area and the dam. "It was only a minor tremor, we too felt it but very lightly.

None of the meters that detect and record earthquakes are showing any information. Our engineers will carry out an investigation into the matter."

Disaster Management Center Deputy Director Pradeep Kodippili said no scales have recorded the said tremor.

According to several residents in the said areas, "It was as if something is happening below the ground level and when it happened there was kind of an echoing booming. Due to the vibration doors and windows shook. We thought it was either a blast or an earthquake. There are some cracks in the walls in some houses."

No to child... From page 01

Minister Sabry said that representatives of Muslim women's organizations had discussed the issue with him and he said he too was of the view that child marriages should be stopped.

Speaking to the media, the Minister said action has been taken to obtain views of the Maha Sangha and to inform them of the changes to be made in the Judiciary and the new amendments to be made and sought their advice as Justice Minister.

Minister Sabry said that the Chief Incumbents had expressed their views on the establishment of a separate court to hear cases pending against monks and those discussions would be held soon.

The Minister said the 19th Amendment to the Constitution will be repealed and the 20th Amendment will be introduced soon and a new Constitution will be introduced later. He said the government is taking action to create a country free from the menace of corruption.

Responding to a question raised by a journalist as to whether action would be taken to repeal the 13th Amendment to the Constitution, the Minister said that the matter had not been discussed in the Cabinet.

The Justice Minister said the amendment to the Constitution will be passed after obtaining views of all parties. The Minister said there were many challenges that they will have to overcome.

However, the defeated faction has taken a bold decision to bring the party back on track considering the unsatisfactory results of the recent election. To achieve that, selecting a new party leader is required, but they have failed to come to a final decision yet.

This will be discussed at the Working Committee meeting to be held in first week of September. The names of Ravi Karunanayake, Ruwan Wijewardene, Vajira Abeywardane and Daya Gamage are in the discussion for UNP leadership at present.

Wijewardene stated this to the media after visiting the Mahanayakes of the Malwatte and Asgiriya Chapters in Kandy yesterday (30).

He said Opposition Leader Sajith Premadasa has no opportunity to become the UNP leader as he has formed a separate Party and entered Parliament under that Party. The Deputy General Secretary also said that he has a proper plan to restructure the party and thereby win the trust of the party supporters. He said that the Working Committee of the UNP will meet and take a friendly decision for the sake of the supporters next week.

President inspects Neluwa – Lankagama road

'We will fulfill people's needs without harming environment'

During the last few days, the electronic, print and social media reported that rehabilitation work of Neluwa – Lankagama road is causing damage to the Sinharaja Forest Reserve and the surrounding ecosystem.

President Gotabaya Rajapaksa visited Neluwa Lankagama on Saturday (29) to get firsthand information of the situation and to obtain views of experts and the residents in the area.

After inspecting the suspended development work, the President pointed out that the long-felt need to rehabilitate the road should be carried out while protecting the Sinharaja Forest Reserve and nearby vicinities.

The history of Lankagama area dates back to King Walagamba. Tea is the main livelihood of the people living here. For over a period of 100 years, villagers transported their tea leaves to Deniyaya and Neluwa through the road

- Rehabilitation of Neluwa – Lankagama road to be completed within 90 days
- No harm should be caused to forest reserve and ecosystem
- Permanent bridge to replace hanging bridge
- 2,100 plants to be added to the reserve

close to the Sinharaja Forest. The unsatisfactory condition of the road hinders transportation of patients to the Neluwa, Udugama and Karapitiya hospitals. It also causes many hardships to the children going to school as well as to the day-to-day activities of the villagers.

Rehabilitating of the Neluwa – Lankagama – Pitadeniya road was to be a relief measure to address these difficulties. Simultaneously, a 120 feet long and six foot wide bridge will be constructed to replace the existing hanging bridge over the Ginganga in Lankagama. This will assist children in Wathugala, Lankagama, Nilwella, Kolonthotuwa and Pitadeniya to go to school without difficulty.

The President directed officials to distribute three plants to each of 700 families in Lankagama and to get the families to nurture the total of 2,100 plants and add them to the forest reserve. People in the area said that they protected the Sinharaja Forest and its ecosystem from generation to generation and strongly objected to the moves by certain environmentalists who act without proper knowledge in obstructing one of their basic needs being met. A father who was carrying his toddler on his shoulder requested the President, "Please do not let our children suffer the way we did."

The Maha Sangha blessed the President for taking the decision to rehabilitate the road for the benefit of the residents in the area who suffer due to lack of basic facilities.

Highways Minister Ramesh Pathirana, Wildlife and Forest Conservation Minister C.B. # Fund to be set up to renovate Deegawapiya Defence Secretary Maj. Gen. (Retd) Kamal Gunaratne said a fund called the Deegawapiya Trust Fund will be set up to expedite renovation of Deegawapiya Stupa, an ancient Buddhist sacred shrine and an archaeological site in the Ampara District.

He said Deegawapiya Buddhist temple and the site with archaeological importance, built by King Saddhatissa, were neglected in the past.

"This is a sacred site not only for local devotees but for Buddhists around the world," he said.

The Defence Secretary noted that the Government funds would not be used for renovation but would raise funds from contributions made by Buddhists in Sri Lanka and abroad to complete renovation.

Maj. Gen. Gunaratne, who is also the Chairman of the Presidential Task Force appointed on Archaeological Heritage Management in the Eastern Province, has visited the Deegawapiya Raja Maha Viharaya in Ampara to discuss commencing of its renovation work today (Aug 29).

He said that several initiatives were taken to renovate the Deegawapiya Stupa in the past but those were halfway come to a standstill due to some reasons but under the directives of President Gotabaya Rajapaksa, the Government would fully complete renovation of this ancient temple site before three years.

"According to advice from archaeologists and officials of the Archaeology Department, we expect to complete the restoration work of this Stupa within two to three years for Buddhist devotees to worship," he said.

According to the Defence Secretary, the Armed Forces and Civil Security Department (CSD) will provide labour and the expertise of the Sri Lanka Army Engineers. "The technical contributions and knowledge will be provided by the archaeologists and experts of the Archaeology Department. Therefore, we will be able to commence the renovation of Deegawapiya Stupa, which is one of the prominent archaeological sites in the Eastern Province soon, he said.

Maj. Gen. Gunaratne said the Deegawapiya Stupa would be renovated to give a similar outlook of the Ruwanweli Stupa in Anuradhapura.

"I invite people of our country to support this great charity in any possible way once the fund is established," he said.

The Maha Sangha including Deegawapiya Raja Maha Viharaya Nayaka Ven. Mahawewa Sobhitha Thera, Aranthala International Buddhist Centre Ven. # Buddhist temple in Oman flourishes

MAHINDA P. LIYANAGE, Galle Central Special Corr.

Buddhist migrant workers in Oman set up a small shrine in 1980. In 1982, K.G. Tilak, a migrant Sri Lankan worker from Wanduramba in Galle, installed a five feet high Buddha statue and over 3,000 Buddhists from all over Oman took part in the religious event at that small temple in 1985.

In 1989, the Buddha Statue and the shrine items had to be kept in a room at the J&P Asaba camp. The Sri Lankans again started their usual religious observances at the Asaba camp.

During this period, there was a special tree planting project along the highway from the Muscat International Airport to Qurum, suburb of Muscat. Saplings such as 'Nuga', 'Asatu' and Bo were planted under the project. Project Manager T.H. Anil Chandraratna brought a sacred Bo tree from Malaysia and planted at the premises on the Full Moon Poya Day of November 1993. Since then the new shrine progressed as a thriving Buddhist place of worship with a number of additions and with regular Buddhist festivals with the participation of increasing numbers of Buddhist devotees in Oman. By this time the shrine comprised a wooden stupa.

The Daham School students in Oman.

In 1999, late Ven. Maduluwawe Sobhitha Thera was brought to Oman for a public sermon where many Buddhists in Oman participated. In the same year, an all-night pith chanting was held in Muscat and Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa arrived in Oman for the religious event. The Dhamma School started in 2004 with six students now caters a about 150 students. The Sri Lankan teachers in Oman Sri Lankan School teach at the Dhamma School.

However, with the demise of the donor of land of the temple, the property was sold and the shrine had to be temporarily shifted to another location. The Buddhists employees of Oman again confronted with new problem of finding a suitable land in Oman to locate the temple.

Subsequently, Kulathunga Widyarupage, who is personally known to Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa met him in a visit to Sri Lanka and explained the predicament they had faced with. Ven. Mahamewane Mangala Nayaka Thera, who had visited Oman for a sermon, also had explained the need of a land for the temple.

Premiere Mahinda Rajapaksa directed the Sri Lankan Embassy in Oman to provide a space at the embassy for the temple. Sri Lankan Accordingly, Ambassador Dr. Haneefa initiated arrangement to relocate the temple at the embassy.

The temple which was initially called J&P Temple was subsequently renamed as Dam Ram Vihara as suggested by late Scholar Piyasena Rathuwathana. The name was again changed as Sambuddha Jayanthi Dam Ram Vihara on account of 2600th Sambuddha Jayan-thi Commemoration. Afterward in an unexpected turn the land on which the Sri Lankan embassy was situated was sold by the owner of the property to a third party. The Sri Lankans in Oman again informed the Prime Minister about the sudden sale of the land. Premier Mahinda Rajapaksa then instructed the Foreign Employment Bureau to purchase the entire land and operate the embassy and the temple without interruption. The personal companionship of Prime Minister Mahinda had with Qaboos bin Said Al Said, the then Sultan of Oman, was an added advantage in the purchase of the land in Muscat.

As the Embassy land in Oman became the property of Foreign Employment Bureau at present, Sri Lankans now have their own fully fledged Buddhist temple in Oman.

“ This locally fabricated blast protected ambulance comes with enhanced facilities including a more spacious interior where the doctor could treat the patient easily. ”

Military engineers achieve success with modified Unibuffels

MANOHARI KATUGAMPALA

At the centre of our story are the Sri Lanka Army's Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (SLEME) who have made a significant contribution by manufacturing armoured vehicles for the world. The Sri Lankan military is taking the lead not only by safeguarding the country, but also by manufacturing Unibuffels (the improvised version of Unicorn) which were handed over to the shippers recently to be shipped to the Sri Lankan Peacekeeping Combat Convoy Company who are serving in Mali.

This locally fabricated blast protected ambulance comes with enhanced facilities including a more spacious interior where the doctor could treat the patient easily. It also has essential medical equipment and refrigerators that can store medicines which can be used in the case of an emergency, non-blast glassware protection and a portable ladder which could easily be fixed to any place for combat requirements.

This ambulance has oxygen cylinders, a small refrigerator, saline holders, oxygen masks, defibrillators which can restore a normal heartbeat by sending an electric shock and pressure meters.

Presently, 243 Sri Lankan UN Peacekeepers, including 20 officers and 223 other ranks, together with 65 vehicles, are serving the Mali Combat Squadron.

Adding a new chapter to local military history, the troops of Sri Lanka Electrical and Mechanical Engineers have created nine modernized versions of air-conditioned Unibuffels for the UN peacekeeping operations in Mali.

Under the guidance and the directions of the Chief of Defence Staff and Army Commander Lieutenant General Shavendra Silva, the troops were able to create these modern armoured vehicles according to US standards. Although locally designed, this vehicle has features similar to an imported Unibuffel.

Army Commander Lieutenant General Shavendra Silva said imported WMAZ vehicles, each costing about Rs 40 million, were purchased for UN troops which are expensive. He added that combat squadrons are generally supplied with those vehicles, but the skilled SLEME troops spending nearly one-fourth of that expenditure, managed to produce these vehicles in an impressive manner.

“These Unibuffels have similarities with those WMAZ vehicles, but the numbers that can move in these Sri Lankan ones are more and they are fully air-conditioned as against imported ones sans air-conditioning in accordance with UN needs and specifications,” said the Army Commander. A distinct feature of the Unicorn was that the driver-passenger compartment was undivided. According to soldiers in the battlefield, this feature made communication among the two sections easier than that in a South African made Buffel where the driver was separated from the passengers.

and Mechanical Engineers Regiment machine workshop in Katubedda.

Normally, it costs nearly Rs. 10.8 million to complete this landmine-resistant ambulance. The maximum length of this ambulance is 6070mm, 2,430 mm in width and 2,700mm in height. Five persons can travel in the ambulance. This vehicle has a high-standard protection level which can protect against hand grenades and landmines. Also, two guns have been placed in the vehicle. As the vehicle is made of a special chassis, it could be

Subsequently, the SLEME has renovated a new military ambulance which can be used for the casualties in the battlefield. Although the manufactured year of this ambulance was 2016, under the directions and supervision of Brigadier (Rtd) K. Rasaputre and Lieutenant Colonel JKD Jayasinghe, the SLEME produced a Unicorn Mark VI vehicle in 2010. Later on, this vehicle was renovated, including modern facilities, at the Sri Lanka Electrical utilized for both mobile patrols and combat duties.

This Unicorn ambulance is powered by a well-developed engine which can easily deal with both road and off-road conditions. Technology in our military has advanced to meet and compete with international standards. With the continuous growth of the Sri Lankan military, the SLEME's meticulous service has embellished both the Motherland and the world at large.

Drinking water for all in five years - State Minister

"President Gotabaya Rajapaksa has entrusted me the task of providing adequate drinking water to the half of the population in the next five years. In the 72 years since independence, all governments provided drinking water to only 51 per cent of the population. I, however, will fulfill this challenge," Rural and Regional Drinking Water Supply Development State Minister Sanath Nishantha Perera said.

State Minister Nishantha Perera was addressing a gathering of officials, journalists and supporters after assuming duties at his Ministry recently, a communique issued by his media unit said.

He said that although he was getting the full support from the President, the Prime Minister and his Cabinet Minister, he also needs the support of the officials, journalists and the public. "The challenge before me could only be achieved through a collective effort," he said. The State Minister said that seven per cent of the total population are facing a severe scarcity of drinking water and 24 Grama Niladhari divisions have been identified as the hardest hit.

"As an immediate step, I will set up a bowser water supply programme for all of these worst affected areas. Forty eight water bowsters will be set up for 24 hours a day. I have instructed to use three drivers per bowser with each having to shoulder a shift of eight hours a day. The water tanks are still being installed at all intersections," he said.

The State Minister said that he will carry out this gigantic task in five years.

He requested relevant officers to fulfill their duty to the maximum to provide an effective service to the public.

"I work 20 hours a day. I will provide all necessary facilities, allowances and overtime to all officers and employees who are willing to join the effort without any hesitation," he added.

Indian Coast Guard thwarts smuggling sea cucumber worth Rs.127 mn to Sri Lanka

In a coordinated mission that involved air and sea-based assets, the Indian Coast Guard apprehended a fishing boat that was attempting to smuggle sea cucumber, an endangered species, into Sri Lanka. The apprehended fishing boat was carrying one tonnes of sea cucumbers, which are valued at about US$ 683,000 or Rs.127 million).

The fishing boat along with three crew members have been brought to Tuticorin for further investigation.

The interception of the boat had taken place on Saturday (August 29) noon and the boat was just about 6 Km from the International Maritime Boundary line. The boat was intercepted off the Mandapam coast. Notably, the northwestern tip of Sri Lanka is easily accessible (in terms of distance) from the areas surrounding Mandapam town in Tamil Nadu. Some parts on the north-western tip of Sri Lanka are less than 100 km or 54 nautical miles away, from certain points on the Tamil Nadu coast.

Sea cucumbers are an important constituent of the coral ecosystem and are categorized as an 'endangered species' with their harvest being banned under the Wildlife Protection Act of 2001. They play an important role in maintaining the health of marine ecosystems. By excreting inorganic nitrogen and phosphorus, they enhance the productivity of benthic animals - those living on the ocean floor.

One of the by-products of the sea cucumber's digestion of sand is calcium carbonate, a key component of coral reefs. To survive, coral reefs must accumulate calcium carbonate, and thus sea cucumbers play a vital role in their preservation. Sea cucumbers also maintain the transparency of seawater by eating sewage. Feeding and excretion by sea cucumbers also increase alkalinity, which counteracts ocean acidification. Illegal harvesting and over exploitation of these animals leads to poorer sediment health, reduces nutrient recycling and impacts biodiversity.

Much of the sea cucumbers smuggled out of Tamil Nadu are said to be for Sri Lanka and other South-East Asian countries, where they are consumed as food and used to prepare medicines.

In terms of the Coast Guard's areas of responsibility, their aircraft and vessels monitor and secure the 7,516 km long coastline and India's Exclusive Economic Zone that is over two million Sq Km. (Zee News)

Obituary Notice Professor JASK Jayakody

Obituary - Professor JASK Jayakody, Professor of Management of the Faculty of Management & Finance, University of Colombo was an invaluable asset to management education in Sri Lanka in all spheres of academic life: teaching, research and administration. He dedicated his entire life to developing, improving and contributing in different capacities to various programmes and institutions of not only the Faculty of Management & Finance, but other institutions within the University of Colombo, other universities and the University Grants Commission, and professional bodies. The number of hours he spent in contributing to one or more of these institutions everyday were far greater than the time he devoted to his own family.

As a previous Unit Coordinator of the Postgraduate and Midcareer Development Unit of the Faculty of Management and Finance, he streamlined the MBA programme offered by the University of Colombo, raising its quality, instilling discipline in students and staff alike, and enhancing its reputation. The standards of research teaching and evaluation he introduced to the MBA programme laid a solid foundation for the academic development of many young lecturers scattered throughout the Sri Lankan university network. This foundation enabled many of them to not only gain PhD candidatures in world renowned universities, but to shine among their peers in those programmes. Through this formal contribution to research education, through many other formal and informal contributions, and also by inspiring young academics through example, encouragement and sometimes even scolding, Professor Jayakody was unquestionably instrumental in developing a research culture in the Faculty of Management and Finance, University of Colombo.

The service of Professor Jayakody was not limited to the Faculty of Management & Finance of University of Colombo.

At the time of his untimely demise, he was serving his second term as the Director of the Institute of Human Resource Advancement. During his short tenure he raised the standards of education provided by this institution to heights unprecedented since the inception of the institute. As the first Head of the Research Centre of the Postgraduate Institute of Management (PIM), affiliated to the University of Sri Jayewardenepura, Professor Jayakody also raised the standard of research education of that institution to unprecedented heights, contributing to a greater number of completed PhDs during his tenure compared to the number produced in the entire previous history of PIM. In addition to these contributions, Professor Jayakody also served as a member of the Council of Management of the National Centre for Advanced Studies in Humanities and Social Sciences (NCAS), and the Board of Study of the Sri Lanka Institute of Marketing (SLIM).

While working in many capacities for betterment of management and research education of the country, Professor Jayakody never lost sight of the true calling of an academic: producing and disseminating knowledge through research. He has published in high ranking journals such as the Journal of Knowledge Management and the International Journal of Human Resource Management and, to the end, was involved in several research projects. A number of research papers that will be published in time to come will bear his name as a co-author. The loss of Professor JASK Jayakody will leave a vacuum in the Sri Lankan university system and the arena of management education of the country that is unlikely to be filled for many decades to come.

The funeral of Professor Jayakody will be held on Monday, August 31, 2020. The cortege will leave his residence at 3.00pm.

End the Car Permits

The Government had to take drastic measures to protect the economy with the advent of the Coronavirus pandemic. Restricting a wide range of imports was among those measures, since it was essential to halt the outflow of foreign exchange and prevent the free fall of the Rupee during that critical period. With the economy recovering, albeit slowly, the Government has allowed certain essential items to be imported.

Sri Lanka spends millions of dollars per year to import vehicles, given that there are only a couple of local assemblers, that in turn are dependent mostly on imported Completely Knocked Down (CKD) kits. The import of vehicles (apart from certain essential commercial, agricultural and construction vehicles) was a casualty of the import embargo and rightly so. No new non-commercial passenger vehicles (except those ordered before the import ban came into force) have been unloaded here for almost six months.

This really does not matter at least for a few more months, since thousands of unregistered vehicles are still awaiting buyers at "car sales" islandwide. Most, if not all, of these are fully duty paid vehicles. But this had posed a dilemma for Government concessionary permit holders, who are generally supposed to import brand new vehicles.

The Government has now reached a compromise solution, whereby these permit holders can buy vehicles which have already been imported but not yet registered. Although the details are not very clear, it is likely that the Government will offset the duty component for the importers, who should then sell the vehicles at the "permit price". This is a good solution because vehicle imports may not resume at least until the end of the year.

But the time has indeed come to review the whole permit system, which currently benefits public servants, MPs and a few other categories. Sri Lanka is perhaps the only country where a certain section of society enjoys tax concessions on vehicles, while the ordinary masses have to pay duties and taxes exceeding 200 percent even on a small car.

It is common knowledge that the vehicle permit system is widely and openly abused by both politicians and public servants – there are plenty of "Permits for Sale" and "Permits Wanted" advertisements in Sunday newspapers. Some of the high-value permits for vehicles having a CIF value of US$ 55,000 (Rs.10 million Approx.) change hands for twice that amount or more. The result is a huge loss to the economy as the tax net is cheated twice – once when the permit is sold and again when the vehicle is actually imported. Moreover, the clearance fee for these vehicles is a laughable Rs.1,750.

One cannot also fathom why our politicians need luxury vehicles ostensibly to serve the public. Do they really need a Toyota Land Cruiser Sahara V8 or a Mercedes Benz GLS to serve their constituents? Granted, there is some rough terrain to traverse for some MPs, but there is nothing that a double cab pickup truck cannot handle. And the price of even a fully duty paid (not duty free) double cab is around Rs.10 million versus a luxury vehicle that costs at least three times more. Sri Lanka is the only country where politicians travel in super luxury vehicles. Scrapping permits is not enough – laws should be brought in to ensure that politicians cannot purchase luxury vehicles at all, unless they do so with their own, verifiable sources of income after paying the duties and taxes in full.

The permits not only result in a huge loss of income to the Customs but also create an imbalance in the vehicle market. The time has indeed come to scrap the vehicle permits for all time – there is no reason why politicians and public servants deserve duty concessions over other sectors. Frankly, there are many people in the private sector and SME sector who make a similar, if not bigger, contribution to the economy, without getting any benefits in return. We should also mention our expatriates, who toil hard for years in foreign lands and get only a paltry US$ 1,750 duty free allowance for buying white goods. If there is any sector that deserves duty concessionary permits, it is the expat workers.

What we need is a rational duty structure that applies equally to everyone across the board for importing motor vehicles. There should be no duty free entitlements for passenger vehicles for anyone (apart from diplomats). A viable duty structure should be introduced from the next Budget.

But there is one area of concern – electric vehicles. The Government should revert to giving tax and duty breaks for pure electric vehicles, which are now going mainstream. All major manufacturers will soon be introducing pure electric vehicles and some manufacturers will only have an all-electric line-up by 2025.

The car is an aspiration and democracy is all about choice. We hope that the Budget 2021 will contain a more viable vehicle duty structure that balances the public's mobility aspirations and the Government's revenue imperatives.

Neocolonialism vs Sovereignty in Sri Lanka

PROF. ASOKA BANDARAGE

On August 5, a new Government was elected in Sri Lanka, bringing down the previous regime associated with the Central Bank bond scam, the Easter Sunday bomb attacks and controversial international agreements.

The new Government has come into office with a two-thirds majority in parliament, promising to bring prosperity, security and communal harmony to the beleaguered country. Achieving these goals depends to a large extent on how neocolonialism and sovereignty are addressed.

Colonialism involves control of a less powerful country by a powerful country to exploit resources and increase its power and wealth. In essence, neocolonialism involves the same factors: militarism, external expropriation of natural resources, deception and manipulation, collusion with local elites, incitement of ethnic and religious differences (and other forms of balkanization and destabilization) and consequential local resistance to external aggression.

Today, strategically located in the ancient east-west Indian Ocean maritime trade route, Sri Lanka faces competition for control by China on one side and the US-led Asia-Pacific Quadrilateral Alliance (also including India, Japan and Australia) on the other.

The new Sri Lankan Government says it will reconcile competing external interests. Speaking on behalf of Sri Lankan President Gotabaya Rajapaksa, the recently appointed Foreign Secretary, retired Navy Commander Admiral Jayanath Colombage, has stated: "Sri Lanka should be a neutral country. Sri Lanka does not want to be caught up in the power game. Sri Lanka wants to develop friendly international ties with everybody. Sri Lanka should have Sri Lanka-first policy."

Sri Lanka has been a participant in China's US$ 4 trillion Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) since 2005. In January 2017, the previous Government granted an 85% stake of the Hambantota Port, in the most strategic central point in the Indian Ocean, to the China Merchant Port Holding Company in a 99-year lease.

China is Sri Lanka's largest creditor and has provided generous support during the Covid-19 pandemic. Given local concerns over the Hambantota Port deal, President Rajapaksa has previously stated that, on election, he would revisit the lease agreement and renegotiate it. More recently, he has stated that his Government is not planning to amend the commercial terms of the agreement, but wishes to amend agreements concerning port security.

While Sri Lankan activists have been protesting the environmental and social impact of expanding Chinese projects, the Quadrilateral Alliance is seeking to involve Sri Lanka in countering Chinese expansion in Asia, making the country a key battleground of geopolitical rivalry.

Allaying the fears of India and the US that Hambantota Port could become a Chinese military base, the new Sri Lankan Government has stated that the port should be "limited to commercial activities only. It is zero for military purposes.... Sri Lanka will not afford any particular country to use Sri Lanka as a staging area to do anything against another country—especially so India."

But how would the Quadrilateral Alliance respond if there were real or perceived military activity? It is not hard to imagine a dangerous military situation escalating far beyond Sri Lanka's control.

The policy of President Rajapaksa, as articulated by Foreign Secretary Colombage, is that "as far as strategic security is concerned, Sri Lanka will always have an India-first approach. That means Sri Lanka will not do anything harmful to India's strategic security interests. As far as economic development is concerned, we cannot depend on one country. We are open to anyone."

However, India's political and military involvement during the separatist war, especially its impositions of the 13th Amendment of the Sri Lankan Constitution and the Indian Peace Keeping Force (IPKF) on Sri Lankan soil, have left fear and antipathy toward India.

The Indo-Lanka Accord that introduced these developments was hammered out in secrecy and signed without Parliamentary consultation on July 29, 1987, during a 24-hour curfew. It faced massive resistance and ushered in one of the most violent and anarchic periods in the island's modern history.

Despite India's failure to curb Tamil militancy and the failure of the provincial Council system, India wants Sri Lanka to maintain the 13th Amendment and the Provincial Councils that it introduced to appease Tamil separatist sentiments. However, the new Sri Lankan Government is under increasing domestic pressure to abrogate the 13th Amendment and to assert Sri Lanka's sovereignty and political independence from India.

Concerned about Chinese encroachment at Hambantota Port, India is pursuing control over Sri Lanka's other strategic seaports and to develop the British-colonial-era Oil Tank Farm in the Eastern seaport town of Trincomalee, through a subsidiary of the Indian Oil Corporation (IOC), despite protests by Sri Lanka's petroleum trade unions.

External powers are also keen to gain control over the Port of Colombo, one of the busiest in South Asia and an important transit hub in the region. Japan is keen for access given its high dependency on energy supplies via the Indian Ocean. There is now a push by the US and India to privatize the Colombo port's Eastern Container Terminal (ECT) and hand it over to an Indian company.

Rajapaksa remains committed to honor a memorandum of understanding signed in 2019 by Sri Lanka, India and Japan on the ECT. According to Colombage, "the policy of the President was that no national asset would be given in total control to any country" and the MoU is being honored because it is "an arrangement between the two countries. The only thing is that there is opposition to it from port workers."

On July 31, 10,000 Colombo port workers resisting the privatization of state assets began a strike blocking all roads into and inside the port, completely paralyzing it. Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa, the president's brother, did meet with union leaders and indicated that their key concern was to avoid antagonizing India. Is this an indication of further Sri Lankan subservience to external power, at the cost of local agency and sovereignty?

Given the history of US hegemony and foreign interventions, there is a justified fear in Sri Lanka of American interference in local governance and control of resources. Unsurprisingly, the country is experiencing intense pressure via multiple US military and economic-development treaties.

On November 6, 2019, 10 days before the election that brought Gotabaya Rajapaksa to power, the Government Medical Officers Association (GMOA) filed a Fundamental Rights Petition seeking to halt progress of three pending treaties with the US: the MCC (Millennium Challenge Corporation) Compact on infrastructure development, and two military treaties, the ongoing ACSA (Acquisition and Cross Service Agreement) and new SOFA (Status of Forces Agreement).

The petitioners stated that the MCC compact would violate fundamental Sri Lankan sovereignty and independence, clearly upheld by the Constitution. There is also concern at the irreversible nature of such far-reaching treaties.

Among other objectives, the MCC Compact seeks to privatize and commodify state land for investors, including foreign corporations. President Gotabaya Rajapaksa promised to discard the MCC Compact during his election campaign, and after coming into office his Government appointed the Gunaruwan Committee to study the issue.

Its final report in June raised serious issues on its implications to social, economic and security interests of the country. The Sri Lankan government plans to submit the report to the Cabinet and then to Parliament for debate on a compromise, that is, as Colombage indicates, the Government plans to go ahead with the MCC Compact in some form or other.

There have also been clear reports that, whether or not the compact is signed, certain elements will proceed regardless. For example, "the e-land registry, cadastral mapping, parcel fabric map, deed registry scanning and digitizing, state land information and valuation are being outsourced to multiple private parties selected by the US Embassy in Colombo." Are external pressures so great that they will inevitably find a way to mold Sri Lanka's future?

Military engagement with Sri Lanka is considered vital to US objectives in the region. The ACSA signed by the previous Sri Lankan Government on August 4, 2017, provides the basis to set up a US "logistic hub" in Sri Lanka to secure support, supplies and services at sea.

Similarly, the proposed SOFA would allow US military personnel to operate in any part of Sri Lanka, without restriction. Sri Lankans fear that SOFA would make "the whole island ... a US-controlled super state operating above the Sri Lankan Laws and State...."

A Cabinet spokesman suggested on July 1 that the SOFA has already been signed but the new Government has made no denial or retraction. Meanwhile the Sri Lankan public is left completely in the dark.

President Gotabaya Rajapaksa and Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa were voted in with the faith and respect of most Sri Lankans, not least for their roles in ending the 30-year war with the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). Most do not doubt their devotion to the country. Their exemplary management of the Covid-19 pandemic has reinforced this respect.

However, there is a growing sense in the country that the overt and covert pressures from external powers, exemplified by these impending agreements, are so great that a path of neutrality will require deep resolve and conviction. It is, then, the democratic responsibility of Sri Lankans to stay informed, see through the bias of power, and exercise their freedom of expression nonviolently.

Our ancestors sacrificed their blood, sweat and tears to safeguard the sovereignty and independence of our country, and it has no price. A luta continua (The Struggle Continues).

One Nation, Six Governments - COVID-19 battle uncovers Australian Federalism

A map of Australian Federal States

Australian PM Scott Morrison at the Bush Summit

Morrison said this week "when the States unilaterally erected borders in the early stages of the pandemic, it wasn't the most pressing issue" but on hindsight he now says that "we would have spent more time (at national cabinet meetings) on that".

The Prime Minister has meanwhile vowed to establish a "hotspot" policy towards deciding on border closures. Acting Chief Medical officer Paul Kelly has been asked to come up with a clinical definition of a coronavirus hotspot to force State Governments to explain border restrictions.

With such a national definition, Morrison plans to put pressure on State Governments that put harsh travel restrictions on people who do not come from these hotspots. While the States would be invited to sign on to the national definition of a hotspot, Morrison indicated that he will forge ahead with it regardless of the States' agreement.

The Morrison Government is meanwhile moving to present new legislation in Parliament to regain control of Australia's foreign policy and national economic planning. The new bill will regulate all agreements that State and Territory Governments, local councils and public universities make with foreign nations. A public register would soon be established where all existing arrangements would have to be disclosed, then reviewed by the Foreign Minister.

Foreign Minister Marise Payne told ABC Radio on August 27 that the Government has identified 135 agreements with 30 different countries that would be reviewed. She indicated that an agreement signed by Victoria's left-leaning Labour Premier Andrews in 2019 with China, without consultations with the Federal Government, to join China's Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) will be one of them. The Morrison Government is a staunch ally with the US in opposing the BRI.

Under the proposed Foreign Relations Bill, the Foreign Minister could review and terminate any existing agreements, if they are considered adverse to Australia's foreign relations or are inconsistent with foreign policy.

"Australia's foreign policies and relationships must always be set to serve Australia's interests," Morrison said in a statement released from his office on August 26. "One of the most important jobs of the Federal Government is to protect and promote Australia's national interest," he added. [IDN-DepthNews]

KALINGA SENEVIRATNE

China may have one nation and two systems, but in Australia, it looks like there is one nation and six systems. As the second wave of coronavirus spreads across the continent, the State Premiers have taken unilateral decisions to close borders to travellers from other States to the dismay of Prime Minister Scott Morrison.

Speaking at the Bush (Regional) Summit on August 28, Morrison bemoaned "Australia was not built to have internal borders, in fact the very point of federalism was not to have them". While acknowledging that COVID-19 has touched people everywhere, he added, "We must not allow this crisis, this pandemic, to force us to retreat into provincialism. That's not the answer".

Federalism was adopted in Australia on January 1, 1901, when the six self-governing Australian colonies of New South Wales (NSW), Queensland, South Australia (SA), Tasmania, Victoria, and Western Australia (WA) federated, formally constituting the Commonwealth of Australia.

Federalism is a type of Government in which the power is divided between the National Government and other Governmental units such as State Governments with their own Premiers and Cabinet. However national economic planning, foreign policy and defence are the domain of the National Government based in Canberra, Australia's national capital.

The border closures by State Governments have come into renewed scrutiny and criticism, after the death of unborn twins to an NSW mother who could not get approval to cross the border to Queensland in time for emergency surgery.

SBS Television featured this week a South Sudanese migrant mother in Sydney, who could not go to Adelaide in SA to perform the traditional last rites for her daughter who died suddenly there. She's been struggling to get permission to travel inter-state for four weeks. After the television expose, she was given permission to cross the State borders but under the condition that she has to quarantine there for two weeks before performing the last rites for the daughter.

Until the COVID-19 pandemic, Australia's State borders were almost non-existent for travellers. There were no border checkpoints on the roads, and one was not even aware that a border has been crossed. If you fly between states, you would just walk off the flight upon arrival, picking off the bags on the way out. But today, borders are manned by Police checkpoints, sometimes assisted by Army personnel. There are also checks at airports and travellers are escorted to quarantine facilities.

In border areas, especially between NSW and Victoria, and NSW and Queensland, people are made to feel as if they live in two different countries. They used to cross borders to work, to go shopping, for medical services or for farm supplies, even sometimes to send children to school daily, now they are not allowed to do so unless special permission is obtained.

Farmers are being badly hit by the border closures. This week federal agriculture minister David Littleproud made a plea for "common sense" to prevail over border restrictions, for farm produce to move across Australia's State borders freely. Minister accused state leaders of focusing only on urban communities and neglecting the needs of rural farming communities where the virus is almost non-existent. He wants farmers to have freedom of navigation for agricultural produce, which would allow them to cross closed state borders.

"It's really distressing not only for businesses but when you see the human toll of people not being able to access medical attention because that's where they get it from the other side of the border," he told the national broadcaster ABC TV's Insider program.

Ironically, at the beginning of the pandemic, regional communities closed themselves off worried that their vulnerable healthcare systems would be overwhelmed by people from more populated areas travelling to smaller communities to isolate.

When the second coronavirus wave hit Melbourne in July, Victorian premier Daniel Andrews put some five million people under a six-week lockdown to help stem its spread. The second wave came when the virus sneaked out from a quarantined hotel through part-time security guards. The Premier blamed the Federal Government for the outbreak claiming that Melbourne had to take in a larger portion of Australians returning home because many flights landed there, and they could not provide enough trained security officers to man the quarantine hotels. He had to ask for assistance from the National Army when the lockdowns were introduced.

In turn, most states closed their border to Victorians with Premiers in other states starting to talk about protecting Queenslanders, South Australians, Tasmanians or Western Australians rather than Australians. Since, a few states are ruled by the Labour Party, which is in opposition in the Federal Parliament, certain premiers were accused of playing politics.

Home Affairs Minister Peter Dutton accused Queensland's Labour Premier Anastacia Palaszczuk of "playing politics" after she said that her State's hospitals are

A Sri Lankan solution for the issue of devolution

SUGEESWARA SENADHIRA

Now that the Government has initiated work on a new Constitution, the background strategies are already at work. The drafting of the new Constitution will commence after the enactment of the 20th Amendment.

The Government, at the first meeting of the Cabinet of Ministers, decided to abolish the 19th Amendment and to bring in the 20th Amendment to the Constitution. The Cabinet appointed a five-member sub-committee to formulate the 20th Amendment. The members of the sub-committee include Education Minister Prof. G.L. Peiris, Foreign Relations Minister Dinesh Gunawardena, Labour Minister Nimal Siripala de Silva, Justice Minister Ali Sabry and Energy Minister Udaya Gammanpila. The sub-committee is to submit their observation to the Cabinet.

Foreign attempts to influence in internal affairs of Sri Lanka are not new. Not surprisingly, foreign envoys commenced discussions with senior leaders of the Sri Lankan Government and Opposition, the moment it was announced that a new Constitution would be enacted. US Ambassador Alaina Teplitz called on Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa and Indian High Commissioner Gopal Baglay held discussions with leaders of Tamil National Alliance (TNA). There were a series of courtesy calls on Foreign Affairs Minister Dinesh Gunawardena, Justice Minister Ali Sabry, Speaker Mahinda Yapa Abeywardena and Opposition Leader Sajith Premadasa.

At a time when many foreign powers are interested in the proposed new Constitution, the aspiration of the people is for a Sri Lankan solution to the issues concerning the Signing of the Indo-Lanka Accord by President J.R. Jayewardene and Indian PM Rajiv Gandhi.

Constitution of Sri Lanka and not for a foreign-bred deal. The failures of externally formatted packages have failed to find a lasting solution in the past.

Norway brokered a peace deal between the Government and the LTTE failed as that was not a solution people wanted. Earlier this week, former Norwegian peace negotiator Erik Solheim confessed that his mission was doomed to fail. He acknowledged that Norway wanted an agreement based on a Federal solution, but the LTTE was totally against anything short of a separate state.

Solheim, who defended Tiger terrorists and their vision of the so-called 'Tamil cause' for over three decades, finally acknowledged that he knew that the Tiger leader Velupillai Prabhakaran had ordered the killing of former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi. Keeping such evidence a secret for nearly 30 years, Solheim is guilty of suppression of evidence in a murder case. That also shows his partiality towards the LTTE.

Another foreign interference was the Indian 'Parippu' (dhal) drop. The Indo-Lanka Accord of 1987, which was a result of the Parippu drop and the blatant violation of Sri Lankan air space, could not enforce peace because the LTTE terrorists commenced fighting with the Indian Peace Keeping Force (IPKF) deployed in the North and the East to supervise peace.

Norwegian Peace Negotiator Erik Solheim meeting LTTE leader Velupillai Prabhakaran.

When the Tamil United Front (TUF) was formed following the Vad-dukodai Resolution in 1976, the Ceylon Workers Congress (CWC) of Savumyamoorthi Thondaman also joined it. But when its separatist agenda became evident Thondaman left it. Subsequently, Thondaman joined the J R Jayewardene Government as a Cabinet Minister. He found that he could serve his people by cooperating with the Government. "Little Now, More Later," he said and proved that he could get more concessions from the Government when he was part of it. His sane advice to the Tamils of the North and the East was also to cooperate with the Government and serve their people.

Now that a new Constitution is to be drafted, Tamil leaders would get a lifetime opportunity to be stakeholders of the new Constitution. Fortunately, there are many moderates among the Tamil MPs in the new Parliament. The first Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP) MP from Jaffna district for over four decades, Angajan Ramanathan, who topped the vote list in Jaffna and the long-standing Jaffna MP Douglas Devananda, leader of Eelam People's Democratic Party (EPDP) have joined the Government.

National List MP Suren Raghavan too is moderate and can make a positive contribution to Constitution drafting. His experience as Northern Governor will be useful in this task.

Only two MPs, C V Wigneswaran, leader of Tamil Makkal Theiya Kutani (TMTK), and Gajendrakumar Ponnambalam, leader of Ahila

Illankai Tamil Congress (AITC) indicated that they would not cooperate.

SLFP MP Angajan Ramanathan lamented Wigneswaran's inappropriate comment when the MPs were given the opportunity to wish the newly elected Speaker. Devananda said the Tamil community wouldn't benefit from such attacks on the Government. He asked whether such a talk would help the Tamil community to realize their aspirations and solve problems. The EPDP leader emphasized the importance of working with the Government.

Wigneswaran, a former Judge of the Supreme Court, conveniently forgot the assurance given by President that he was the President of all the citizens of Sri Lanka and every citizen living in Sri Lanka has the right to live freely and securely.

The moment Wigneswaran and Ponnambalam displayed their extremist tendencies in Parliament, the pro-LTTE Tamil Diaspora voiced their support to them. The UK based Global Tamil Forum (GTF) extended cooperation to Wigneswaran's TMTK and Ponnambalam's Ahila Illankai Tamil Congress (AITC).

GTF spokesperson Suren Surendiran hailed Wigneswaran and Gajendrakumar for taking a strong stand in respect of the 13th Amendment as well as for raising the accountability issue in Parliament during a debate on President Gotabaya Rajapaksa's Policy Statement.

The Tamil people need a solution and not rabble-rousers like Wigneswaran and Ponnambalam. The people will certainly extend the fullest support to Tamil politicians to cooperate with the Government even under the late elder statesman Savumyamoorthi Thondaman's concept of 'Little Now, More Later' concept, as it would help to remove the grievances of people and raise their living standards. # Doctors and scientists race to develop Coronavirus treatments

If most of us are confused about all the updates swirling COVID-19, imagine what it's like for Adarsh Bhimraj. Not only has this Cleveland Clinic physician had to contend with a growing caseload, he's part of a 16-person team in charge of managing the Infectious Diseases Society of America's guidelines for treating COVID-19.

Between caring for patients at the Ohio hospital and even coming down with a mild case of coronavirus himself, Bhimraj has had to assess a steady stream of new information on how to treat the virus. Researchers around the world are conducting more than a thousand randomized clinical trials testing COVID-19 treatments. Bhimraj and his colleagues on the guidelines panel must navigate through this torrent and highlight the most promising results.

Uncertain though it still may be, knowledge of how the coronavirus works and how to fight it is slowly, surely accruing. Eight months into the pandemic, doctors are gaining a better handle on how to treat the disease. Some therapies are brand-new medications, while others are common medical staples previously shown in clinical trials to be safe and effective for different ailments. Other improvements have come from subtle changes to standard care. All of it, bit by bit, is saving lives.

"None of these therapies are, in Fauci's words, 'game-changers,' right?" Bhimraj says, referencing statements made by Anthony Fauci, the director of the U.S. National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. "But they certainly show a signal that they could be helpful."

Doctors interviewed by National Geographic emphasized that when it comes to treating COVID-19, no silver bullets or easy fixes have been discovered. Antiviral drugs, antibodies, and immune-boosting therapies, either administered by themselves or in multi-drug cocktails, will take time to refine. Even a vaccine won't totally stop the virus in its tracks, and the long-term health burden of COVID-19 remains unknown. "We, as yet, haven't got the answers to all of this, and we're going to be struggling with this across the world for the next year or two," says University of Southampton immunopharmacologist Stephen Holgate. "Having a range of treatments available is going to be really important—and to have the clinical trial evidence that supports it, which is the crucial thing." Of the hundreds of research efforts seeking to validate COVID-19 remedies, one based at the University of Oxford appears to be the early standard-bearer when it comes to separating hope from hype. The Randomised Evaluation of COVID-19 Therapy (RECOVERY) trial is an extensive effort within the United Kingdom to test treatments for COVID-19.

One of the drugs among the array of possible treatments being tested is the steroid dexamethasone. COVID-19 can trigger an overzealous immune response, and like other steroids, dexamethasone can blunt and modify such a reaction. On June 16, the team published their early results about dexamethasone, which showed that among COVID-19 patients requiring oxygen or mechanical ventilation, dexamethasone cut the risk of death by a third, compared to standard therapy alone. For people with milder cases who don't need oxygen support, dexamethasone doesn't seem to help—and might even make things worse. But in the most severe cases, dexamethasone represents a potential lifeline.

"We announced results at lunchtime, and by teatime here, the chief medical officers here in the U.K. went to every hospital, saying they should adopt this as standard practice," says Oxford cardiologist Martin Landray, a co-lead investigator on the RECOVERY trial. "And although I can't prove it, I think it's pretty certain that by the weekend, lives are being saved as a result of that." The study was formally published in the New England Journal of Medicine on July 17. (NatGeo)

First confirmed case of COVID reinfection "not surprising"

Researchers at the University of Hong Kong have confirmed the first instance of a patient being reinfected with coronavirus a second time, suggesting that immunity to the virus may be short-lived. The patient, a 33-year-old man, tested positive for the virus in March and then again in August after returning to Hong Kong from a trip to Spain. But it's not all bad news; this man's case demonstrates that the immune response, while not able to completely ward off a second infection, may be robust enough to prevent less serious illness the second time around.

Almost since the beginning of the pandemic, stories have been popping up in the United States, China, and South Korea from doctors claiming their patients had again tested positive for the virus after recovering. These accounts were anecdotal and the cases never confirmed as two separate infections; they could have resulted from a resurgence of the original infection, or the result of a faulty test result. But this case out of Hong Kong is different. It is the first proven case of reinfection because genetic sequencing showed that the patient had contracted two separate strains of the virus, in March and in August. Hong Kong researchers said that the strain the patient contracted the second time had been circulating in Europe in July and August.

"The difference here is that the doctors were able to sequence the virus twice to say that this is actually two separate infections. And we haven't had that information," Yahoo News Medical Contributor Dr. Dara Kass explains. "We have known since the beginning that there were multiple varieties of the coronavirus in even America. Ones that came from China, ones that came from Europe—and that viruses generally mutate and will have slightly different presentation depending on where you get the infection."

But experts have cautioned against jumping to conclusions about the study.

"We need to put this into context," Dr. Maria Van Kerkhove, technical lead of the World Health Organization's COVID-19 response, said of the Hong Kong study during a live Q&A on Wednesday. (Yahoo)

Protests in Berlin against COVID restrictions

It's late Saturday afternoon behind the Brandenburg Gate in central Berlin. On the street children chalk pictures of flowers and hearts on the ground next to the words, "Humanity, Love, Freedom." Families saunter by, some with entire picnics packed into hand carts, as they make their way to Berlin's Victory Column, keen to find a good spot for their camping chairs.

"Where have you traveled from?" one mother asks another as they set up camp. "Straight from Hamburg," she replies, pointing to her flag: a white castle against a red backdrop. She isn't the only one who's traveled to Berlin today. Other state flags fluttering around suggest that people have traveled from far and wide.

With some unidentifiable German pop music playing in the background, the feeling at the afternoon rally is reminiscent of a town festival, but a closer look at the T-shirts emblazoned with slogans suggests otherwise. Out the back of a hire truck, one man is closing a sale with an elderly, white-haired woman with a walking stick. "That'll be €5 ($5.95)," he says, handing her a red

T-shirt with the word "Querdenken" across the chest. These are the self-proclaimed "lateral thinkers"—the organizers behind the demonstration against the German government's measures to tackle the coronavirus pandemic. According to the Stuttgart-based group, some 20 Articles of the German Constitution are being violated by the restrictions imposed to tackle coronavirus. They want these to be lifted.

Other T-shirts shed light on the ideology of the wide mix of people who have attached themselves to the COVID-skeptical movement in recent weeks — for the large part a mixture of coronavirus doubters, conspiracy theorists and anti-vaxxers.

Particularly popular is the motto of conspiracy theorist Heiko Schrang — "realize, wake up, change" — or slogans like "Don't give Bill Gates a chance," "End the muzzle!" or "No compulsory vaccinations!" Like at previous "anti-coronavirus" demos, members of Germany's far-right scene were also present, many of them visible with the flags of the German Empire and The Kingdom of Prussia. (DW)

Montenegro holds election

Montenegrins are voting in a parliamentary election that is pitting the country's long-ruling pro-Western party against an opposition seeking closer ties with Serbia and Russia. The Democratic Party of Socialists (DPS) has been in power for 30 years.

But pre-election polls have predicted a tight contest in which the DPS may not win enough seats to govern alone.

The campaign has been dominated by divisions over the powerful Serbian Orthodox Church. There have been months of protests since a law was adopted in December allowing the state to seize religious assets when their historical ownership cannot be proven.

The Serbian Orthodox Church has urged people to vote against the DPS.

A total of 81 MPs will be elected in the vote, which is set to close at 20:00 (18:00 GMT). The first results are expected two hours later. What's the background?

Montenegro remained allied in a union with Serbia until 2006 — long after the former Yugoslavia dissolved into independent states. President Milo Djukanovic, 58, has been in charge there since 1990. In more recent years, he was instrumental in securing Montenegro's accession to Nato in June 2017 and has been leading ongoing efforts to gain membership to the European Union.

The opposition is made up of an alliance of parties, called For the future of Montenegro. They have backed the Church-led protests against the religion law, and want closer ties with Russia and Serbia. Montenegrins who identify as ethnic Serbs account for about a third of the country's 630,000 population, according to the latest census data.

And as the majority of Montenegrins are members of the Church, its influence is considerable.

The opposition has accused Mr Djukanovic and his party of having links to organized crime and running the country as an autocracy.

Mr Djukanovic has denied this and says the opposition, with the backing of Russia and Serbia, is seeking to undermine the country's independence. During the previous parliamentary vote in 2016, authorities said they thwarted a planned coup orchestrated by Russian agents and a group of Serb nationalists. (BBC)

Belarus braces for more protests

Riot police have been deployed in the Belarusian capital ahead of the latest demonstration against the re-election of President Alexander Lukashenko.

They have cordoned off Minsk's Independence Square, as columns of people join a march towards it.

Several have already been arrested.

Belarus has been gripped by mass protests, since the 9 August election widely believed to have been rigged in favour of the long-time leader, who has been in power for 26 years.

On Saturday, the authorities withdrew the accreditation of 17 journalists, most of them Belarusian citizens, who have been reporting on post-election protests there for foreign media outlets.

Two journalists with the BBC's Russian service are among those affected.

In a statement, the BBC said it condemned "in the strongest possible terms this stifling of independent journalism".

Unrest in Belarus was triggered earlier this month by an election widely believed to have been rigged in favour of Mr Lukashenko, who has been in power since 1994.

President Alexander Lukashenko

The leading opposition candidate, Svetlana Tikhonovskaya, was detained the day after the vote and left for Lithuania, from where she has since called for protests. Belarus has seen unprecedented opposition demonstrations and workers have staged walkouts at major state enterprises. Thousands have been arrested and there have been numerous reports of police brutality.

At least four people have died and hundreds have been injured.

The European Union and the US are among those to reject the election as neither free nor fair. The EU is preparing sanctions against officials it accuses of rigging the result to deliver Mr Lukashenko's victory and of cracking down on the opposition movement.

Belarus's main ally, Russia, has warned the West against interference.

Russian President Vladimir Putin said he had formed a police reserve force to intervene in Belarus if necessary, and that he had agreed with President Lukashenko "that it won't be used until the situation gets out of control".

Mr Putin phoned his counterpart on Sunday to wish him a happy 66th birthday.

Mr Lukashenko, who has already served 26 years as president, claimed a sixth term when election authorities said he had won 80% of the vote. But

Ms Tikhonovskaya said she had won 60-70% based on results that had been properly counted.

A criminal case has targeted the Co-ordination

Council, which has since been set up by the opposition. Mr Lukashenko accuses it of trying to seize power.

The most prominent opposition leader inside Belarus, Maria Kolesnikova, has been questioned by prosecutors — as has Nobel literature prize-winner Svetlana Alexievich. (BBC)

More rapid COVID tests approved

Move over, slowpoke coronavirus tests that take a week or more to return a result — there's a new generation of rapid tests coming to town. Some are already here and they're poised to transform the landscape.

They are the antigen tests, but are they really all they're cracked up to be? The Food and Drug Administration granted emergency use authorization to another antigen test this week, bringing the total to four.

Compared to the most commonly used type of coronavirus test in the country — molecular diagnostic tests, also called PCR tests — antigen tests don't need complicated chemicals, viral transport media or RNA extraction kits. They don't necessarily require appointments at specialized labs, highly trained technicians, or certain machines. And they can provide an answer in minutes, rather than hours or days.

Problems with any one of these critical PCR test components have led to bottlenecks for the entire process since the start of the pandemic, frustrating patients, doctors and public health experts alike.

Antigen tests work a little differently. The PCR molecular tests actually test for the virus' genetic material and the antigen test is testing for one of the viral proteins, so a piece of the virus," said Dr. Jonathan Quick, managing director for pandemic response, preparedness and prevention at the Rockefeller Foundation.

Because of that, they're not as reliable as traditional PCR tests. According to the CDC, "Antigen tests are more likely to miss an active coronavirus infection compared to molecular tests."

And unlike the first three antigen tests approved, the newest antigen test to join their growing ranks, BinaxNOW, is "the first COVID-19 diagnostic test that a health care provider can perform without an analyzer, meaning that test results can be read directly from the testing card," according to the FDA.

Abbott, the manufacturer of the test, said in a news release the new test returns a result in 10 minutes. It's about the size of a credit card and will cost around $5. The company said it's planning to ship tens of millions of tests in September, ramping to 50 million tests a month at the beginning of October.

That's a big jump from our current testing capacity. According to data from the COVID Tracking Project, the U.S. conducted a little over 4.7 million tests last week. While that might sound like a lot, that still adds up to fewer than 20 million tests a month, and it's far less than the million-plus tests per day some public health experts say we should be doing. When antigen tests finally arrive in great enough numbers on U.S. shores — which should happen within the next three months, according to the experts — it could be a turning point in the pandemic for the country, a step on the road back to normalcy. "Before people go back to work, before they go back to school, before they go to an event, they're going to be able to test themselves," said Murphy. "The tests are going to be cheap. You could do it every day... And it's going to be a game changer."

Quick, who literally wrote the book on ending epidemics, says the PCR test will always have a role as a highly accurate diagnostic test, but the antigen test will be used as a screening test for asymptomatic people. He called antigen tests a "paradigm shift" and "disruptive innovation."

"We estimate that we need about 5 million tests a week for the continuing lab-based diagnostic [test] and about 25 million a week for asymptomatic surveillance testing. And so it's the antigen test, because they are a low cost, fast, and some of the recent ones highly accurate and convenient. So that combination really is what we need to get the scale we need, and the turnaround," he said. (NBC/CNN)

Children can spread virus for weeks - study

Just as schools are reopening, a new study is detailing how kids who have the coronavirus but don't show symptoms can still spread the infection for weeks.

Two Washington-based scientists made the discovery by analyzing South Korean kids who had been hospitalized because they tested positive for COVID-19 — even though roughly four out of 10 had either no symptoms or only mild ones, German news outlet DW reported.

Roberta L. DeBiasi and Meghan Delaney analyzed the cases of 91 kids in 22 hospitals across South Korea because doctors there — unlike in the US — don't release patients until they are fully recovered.

The team found roughly a fifth of the kids never had symptoms; another fifth at first showed no symptoms, then developed mild ones; and three-fifths had symptoms from the start.

DeBiasi and Delaney have found a big range in the time that kids can have COVID-19 symptoms — from three days to three weeks. Half of the kids with symptoms and a fifth of the kids without symptoms were still spreading the coronavirus three weeks after they became infected.

Their work, published Friday on the JAMA Pediatrics website, builds on a study out of Boston that found kids carry a lot of viruses, including the coronavirus.

The Boston researchers, who published their findings Aug. 1 in the Journal of Pediatrics, took nose and throat swabs from people under the age of 21. They found the kids had much higher levels of the coronavirus than adults who were in intensive care units with COVID-19 and far fewer ACE-2 receptors, which experts think are the infection's way of getting into the body. ## Coronavirus: Europe battles new phase

At first, the front line of Europe's fight against the Covid-19 pandemic was fought in hospitals by overstretched health care workers. Now as European countries seek to avoid the long-dreaded second wave, that line has shifted to the streets and is being manned by police forces.

In the last week, several European countries have seen record infection rates. Not since the spring have countries like France, Germany, Italy and Spain seen such a surge in the number of new cases. Countries like Greece and Croatia, largely spared by the first wave, have seen fast rises in August as tourists, taking advantage of the reopening of Europe's internal borders in June, have headed to the beach for their summer holidays.

With authorities determined to avoid a second wave of lockdowns, legislation has been introduced to try and stop the spread of the virus. Nightclubs have been closed in Italy and in Greece, curfews introduced in Spain, Italy and Greece and face-masks made mandatory in an ever-growing number of public, outdoor spaces, in most EU countries: a gradual tightening of regulations that will now have to be enforced. The fight against Covid-19 has become, in these last couple of weeks in Europe, a matter of law and order.

Until recently many of the regulations applied to indoor businesses and were enforced by owners, or to public transport, where they were enforced by the conductors and drivers themselves. Across Europe there were reports of difficulties in the enforcement of the mask rules, from passengers who refused to wear them being made to disembark from "vapo-rettos," the small boats that ferry tourists around the waterways of Venice, to the tragic killing in France of a bus conductor in July, who died after being attacked by passengers who'd been asked to put on their masks.

Now with the obligations on mask-wearing extending to the outdoors and with their enforcements shifting to the police, there is a sense of relief from many of those who had previously been in charge. "We were on the front line," says Damien Cospanza, a bus conductor in Marseille in the south of France where mask-wearing was made mandatory in the entire city on Tuesday.

"Sadly people need to be scared. They need to be fined for them to understand that it is mandatory, especially in a city like Marseille. People won't listen much to a conductor but they will listen to the police."

But if the burden has shifted from conductors and shopkeepers to the police, there is now a question of overstretch over the long-term, as regulations tighten and the number of cases continues to grow.

On Thursday, the French Prime Minister announced that masks, already mandatory in some parts of Paris, would be made obligatory throughout the city. "It isn't enough to create new laws, they also have to be respected," Jean Castex pointed out. Since August 17, he said, 30,000 police checks had been carried out on indoor businesses with 1,900 fines levied and 53 establishments closed.

In Marseille, a tourist hot-spot where the obligation to wear a mask outdoors was extended on Tuesday to the entire city, a special team of national policemen has been sent to help local forces enforce the new rules.

As CNN followed the officers around Marseille's old port last week, the unit's commander, Jean-Marc Cortes, explained that his job was more about helping people to understand the new rules, than actually imposing the 135-euro ($159) fine for non-compliance. "If there weren't police on the street enforcing the rule," he said, "people would wear it less. When they see us, it reminds them that it's mandatory and often that's enough."

But already, two weeks after masks were first made mandatory outdoors in France, 700 fines are being issued a day, by an already overstretched police force that has had to deal these last few years with both terrorism and massive protests. "We've had the yellow vests and now it's Covid," says Eric Moulin, the regional secretary of the UNSA police union, "and while we are busy with those missions we cannot also fight other crimes like delinquency ... and that is our primary role, fighting general delinquency. And that is going to take more resources."

In June police forces in France staged several demonstrations, calling for more support from the government and more resources, as protests partly inspired by the Black Lives Matter movement raised fresh concerns about the methods used in several recent French cases of alleged police brutality.

Part of the problem is how confusing the new rules can be. With only some neighborhoods affected by the new rules and little to remind tourists of their limits, it can be difficult to know when you are leaving an area where you don't have to wear a mask and entering one where you do. Take Marseille's 7th district, where masks have been mandatory since August 10. At its seaside, on the promenade, masks were being checked by police, but immediately beneath them, on the crowded Les Catalans beach, there were few masks to be seen. The officers explained that although the obligation to wear the masks did technically apply to the beach as well, it would simply be too difficult to enforce given the vast crowds of sunbathers. (CNN)

Mauritius faces oil spill aftermath

The bodies of whales, turtles and other sea creatures have washed up on the shores of Mauritius, five weeks after a ship carrying thousands of tons of oil ran aground off the Indian Ocean Island.

Fishermen told NBC News they had found melon-headed whales near the spot where the Japanese-owned MV Wakashio crashed into the Point D'Esny reef off the tiny nation's southeast coast July 25. The vessel began spilling oil on Aug. 6 and broke into two parts 11 days later. It was deliberately sunk Monday.

"I know the spill is responsible for their deaths," Yannick Fine, 33, said, adding that some of the whales were pregnant as it was the season for them to breed and nurse their young.

"They used to frolic next to my boat," he added. "Now they are dead. I've seen their mouths covered in oil, I know the spill is responsible for their deaths."

Stephan Gua, a member of the Rezystans ek Alternativ activist group, said that he and other members had seen dead creatures floating in the water earlier this week. Others found alive had "blood around their mouths," he added.

Pictures shared on social media and published in the local press show the whales' mutilated bodies, some with blackened mouths. Other reports said sea turtles, fish and crabs that have been found dead across the country's shoreline.

"It's devastating and these deaths are only the beginning," said Vassen Kauppaymuthoo, an oceanographer and managing director of the private company Delphinium Ltd.

"The situation is going to get progressively worse. We're only seeing the tip of the iceberg," he said, adding that many of the dead animals "would have been eaten by sharks or sunk to the bottom of the sea."

paupmuthoo said that it was "very difficult to think that something other than the oil spill and scuttling," could have caused the deaths of animals found on the coastline.

However, Mauritius' Minister of Fisheries Sudheer Maudhoo disagreed with that assessment, telling a press conference Wednesday that he had been informed that the deaths were not linked to the MV Wakashio.

NBC News has independently approached the government for comment. Autopsies on some of the creatures are being carried out and many are suspicious of the government's assessment, including Carina Gounden, a member of Aret Kokin Nu Laplaz, an environmental association of citizens and nongovernmental organizations on the island.

"They are insulting our intelligence," she said, adding that the government had been "too hasty" to conclude there was no link between the ship and the animal deaths.

"I have talked to people across the coast," she said. "They're saying this is definitely abnormal."

She added that the government had not been transparent enough about its response.

"In Mauritius, there's a feeling that not everything has been told to us," she said. "That there's a cover-up."

Kauppaymuthoo agreed that authorities had downplayed the severity of the situation.

"There's a lack of transparency and coordination," he said. "We need a smooth and efficient recovery. I'd recommend getting scientists together to form an independent scientific body."

"The more time we lose, the greater the impact on the environment and we need to be prepared for further horrific events to come," he added. (NBC)

Double International Priyantha brought honour and fame to Lanka

ALTHAF NAWAZ

If someone is looking for one of the top Sri Lankan sportsmen with brains and brawn and of course smart looks to go with it and an unassuming personality to win the hearts of all his admirers and opponents, then one person stands out. He is none other than Priyantha Ekanayake, arguably one of the greatest sportsmen ever produced by St. Anthony's College Katugastota and one who entertained and inspired many Sri Lankans for over three decades or more. Priyantha represented St. Anthony's College 1st XI Cricket team, 1st XV Rugby team, Senior Basketball team and Athletics team and was the captain of College Rugby & Basketball teams in 1984. He has the rare distinction of being a double International representing the country in both Basketball and Rugby.

In Rugby, Priyantha stamped his class and donned the CH & FC jersey in 1985 and 1986 and played for CR & FC from 1987 to 1991 captaining CR & FC in 1990. His elder brother LV too went onto captain CR & FC in the following year. Both of them were involved in reviving the passion for rugby in Kandy when they crossed over to Kandy Sports Club along with Inthisham Marikar and Sheham

Siddik in 1992. He led the Kandy SC admirably during the 90's while captaining the National Rugby teams from 1986-1997 including four consecutive Rugby Asiads 1990 to 1996 and at the prestigious Hong Kong 7's (1989-1992) tournaments.

Then as an individual his personal achievement was Captaining the Asian Barbarians in 1995 where big game Japanese, Korean and Hong Kong players whom he competed against on the field in the Asian circuit played under him.

Without stopping there, he displayed his administrative skills when he went onto become the President of SLRFU and heading the regional body Asian Rugby Football Union in 2006.

He also had a stint in New Zealand where he played for Ravense Bourne Sports Club in the Premier League and also played in Wales for Ebb Bale Province. In 1997 he made Kandy and the country proud by leading the Asian Barbarians invitation team.

The Barbarians comprised players from Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia and Sri Lanka. The other players who were selected were Thushara Jayalath of Havelocks SC and Asoka Jayasena of Kandy SC.

He became the first Sri Lankan to lead the Asian Barbarians. In the first game against Hong Kong Under 24, which had top class players. He led them from the front and was able to beat them 46 points to 35.

Then in the main game, they met the Hong Kong Dragons where again the Barbarians won 26 points to nil.

A warrior who played the game without fear looked his opponents in the eye and never took a step back no matter what was unfolding in front of him. During his days he tackled hard and ran like a charging bull. He was considered as one of the finest players of his generation.

Today he is the CEO of the SLBSA, the governing body of Baseball, a sport which is gaining momentum in Asia and works indefatigably to raise the standard of the game. Last year Sri Lanka Baseball team defeated the top seeded Pakistan team at the West Asia Tournament, which was a tremendous achievement by them with limited resources.

Sankha, Neyara claim Mixed Doubles at Clay Court Nationals

CHANDRIKA FERNANDO

The combination of Sankha Athukorale and Neyara Weerawansa bounced back into recognition as they clinched the Mixed Doubles title in the Clay Court Tennis Nationals, which continued at the SLTA Courts in Green Path, Colombo yesterday.

Sankha and Neyara, who were eliminated from the Men's and Women's Singles final earlier, made amends by overcoming the more fancied pair of Dineshkanthan Thangaraja and Anika Seneviratne in an exciting final 6-7, 6-1, 10-5.

No doubt, this was a major setback especially for Anika, who was targeting a triple crown having already retained the Women's Singles title for the third successive year and having entered the semi-finals of the Women's Doubles along with her younger sister Alana.

In the Mixed Doubles final, Anika and her partner Dineshkanthan made a rousing start to their campaign as they snatched the opener 7-6 in an absolute thriller only to see them concede the second set rather tamely 1-6.

However, the third and deciding set went into a tie-breaker with Sankha and Neyara displaying tremendous courage and determination before pulling off a tense 10-5 victory in the end.

Meanwhile, top seed Thehan Wijemanne set up a final showdown in the Boys' Under-18 Singles with the third seed Dhilvan Herath by winning their respective semi-final encounters.

Thehan pulled off a hard fought 7-5, 6-3 victory over the unseeded Jaitra De Saram while Dhilvan had the better of the seventh seed Wenuka Kithnula in a thrilling three setter 4-6, 6-3, 10-7.

In the Girls' Under-18 Singles, fifth seed Oneli Perera of Asian International School cruised into the final with a stunning 7-6, 4-6, 10-5 victory over the top seed Tania Doloswala.

In contrast, the bottom seed Savini Jayasuriya of Gateway College enjoyed a convincing 6-0, 6-3 victory over the unseeded Vishmi Serasinghe in the second semi-final encounter.

Djokovic, Williams chase tennis history in US Open COVID bubble

NEW YORK: The US Open becomes the first Grand Slam of the COVID-19 era when it starts Monday in a spectator-free bubble at Flushing Meadows following a troubled build-up that saw several top stars withdraw over coronavirus fears.

Novak Djokovic and Serena Williams headline a tournament that will be unrecognisable from previous Slams due to strict safety protocols that were still not enough to convince some of tennis's biggest names to travel to New York.

Defending champion Rafael Nadal and women's number one Ashleigh Barty are among high-profile absentees at the US National Tennis Center, which just months ago was transformed into an emergency coronavirus field hospital.

Raucous crowds are a hallmark of the US Open, but this the cavernous Arthur Ashe Stadium will be eerily empty to mitigate the risk of infection from the deadly pandemic that has wiped out much of the tennis season, including Wimbledon.

The players are being kept in a tightly controlled environment with regular COVID-19 testing throughout the tournament. Any competitor who tests positive once the event has started will be automatically withdrawn.

Most competitors are staying at one of two hotels where they will be shuttled the 30 minutes to and from the tennis center.

A few, including Djokovic and Williams, have chosen to stay in private homes where they must pay for 24-hour security approved by the United States Tennis Association (USTA).

The security teams are obliged to provide the USTA with information regarding when the player leaves and arrives at the house.

No player is allowed to travel anywhere other than between the tennis center and their accommodation. Any player who leaves the bubble without the written consent of organizers will be thrown out of the tournament. - AFP

Anura happy with progress of President's Cup Tourney

ALTHAF NAWAZ

While the inaugural "Vantage FFSL President's Cup" football tournament has reached its final stage, one of the persons who was instrumental in planning and introducing this tournament to give a kick start was Anura de Silva, the incumbent President of the Football Federation of Sri Lanka (FFSL). Daily News spoke to him to share his views whether this tourney has helped them to achieve the desired goals. According to Anura, the main intention of formulating and conducting this tournament was to restart competitive football which had a drastic impact, after Easter Sunday attacks in April 2019, adverse weather conditions during the latter part of 2019 and followed by the outbreak of COVID-19 pandemic from March this year. With the situation gradually turning towards normalcy, they opted to introduce an effective and aggressive programme to restart and restore football in an attractive manner, following the health ministry guidelines. The FFSL decided to support players, officials and clubs to restart football. They wanted to create a platform to select potential players for the National and U-23 squads, with the aim of establishing a better national team to take part in the FIFA World Cup 2022 qualifying rounds matches, originally scheduled for October and November 2020, which apparently is delayed until March next year due the pandemic, under new coach Amir Alagic from Bosnia/Australia.

The world football governing body FIFA and AFC have provided them grants for football development on an annual basis and they had surplus from the 2019 budget, where they could not complete scheduled activities due to the situation in the country, which they used to conduct this tournament.

At the same time, their proud sponsors Ebony Holdings Pvt Ltd., had shown interest under tough situations when they faced the pandemic, which was a remarkable achievement for FFSL.

They are pretty satisfied with the way the tournament is conducted with the finals to be played on September 2 (Wednesday). This tournament has enabled them to unearth many potential players while observing some constructive football by clubs, a new enthusiasm by clubs with the assistance they had from FFSL. The provision they made to include players from non-playing clubs has really paid dividends for the upliftment of the game as all clubs came out with complete outfits to compete at a strong level.

"The FFSL is happy that the clubs, players and club owners are overjoyed with all aspects of the event so far provided by us.

The National Team Head Coach Amir Alagic and Selectors are also impressed with the outcome. Overall, it's been a successful event pleasing all stakeholders of the game." Said Anura

"The launch of this tournament at the right time in terms of the situation in the country really helped us have the edge over other sports in the country. Media coverage was at the highest level as we launched the competitive events before other sports and my sincere appreciation to all media organizations." concluded Anura.

Central bank to assist in development

DINESH PERERA

The Central Bank of Sri Lanka is going to take active participation in the development of Sri Lanka. Governor Professor W. D. Lakshman said that indirect methods of monetary policy (through financial markets and interest rates) currently practiced are not as effective as direct credit allocation methods like subsidized interest rates, capital controls, credit ceilings, and targeted lending.

Prof. Lakshman cited Japan after the Second World War and the successful economies of East and Southeast Asia as having a high growth trajectory following the adoption of a developmental state structure.

Prof. Lakshman noted that a developmental state structure was not conceptually defined but rather a 'practical combination of systems, institutions, and practices with a clearly laid out objective of achieving developmental objectives.'

"Market mechanisms and processes are carefully planned in a developmental state. They are closely monitored and guided by the state. In a socially planned state markets are allowed to function in specific areas."

Prof. Lakshman expressed these views at the Central Bank's 70th Anniversary Oration on August 28.

Governor noted that the comparative advantage of a country is dynamic and changeable. He said that Sri Lanka mainstream view in the 1990s changed towards the advocacy of a neoliberally understood independent Central Bank.

He criticized this view calling on proponents to realize that even in the strictest fiscal targeting regimes there was the goal of price stability at the maximum potential of the economy implying an indirect acceptance of full employment.

Prof. Lakshman categorized three instances of significant Central Bank assistance to the government being in 1980 following the open economy, in 2009 at the height of the civil conflict, and in 2020 following COVID-19.

The Central Bank is currently working on the formulation of a truly national development banking organization to facilitate credit to SMEs. They are also working on creating a credit guarantee organization.

He cited the past decade as being one of considerable decline in the par value of the rupee and stated that in 2019 the Central Bank intervened in markets despite scarce reserves to build confidence in the Rs.

Citing Prof. H. A. de S. Gunasekera, he said, "unlike countries where Central Banks were set up in post-war and interwar periods in Sri Lanka the Central Bank was set up on conditions of political indifference and apathy."

The Governor was critical of John Exeter and claimed that his report had little concern for Sri Lankan issues of credit and money.

He claimed that Exeter was exaggerating on the extent of his findings and suggested that a Central Banking mechanism was superimposed on the country.

He however noted that in the 70 years there had only been minor changes to the governing legislation.

Chairman Sampath Bank retires

Sampath Bank has notified the retirement of its Chairman, Professor Malik Ranasinghe with effect from August 30, 2020, who served in this position since April 2, 2019.

Before assuming duties as Chairman, Professor Ranasinghe was the Deputy Chairman of the Bank from August 1, 2016, during which he imbibed a deep understanding of the Bank's core values which made him the natural choice of Chairman. Prior to his involvement with Sampath Bank, he was the Vice Chancellor of the University of Moratuwa.

Professor Malik Ranasinghe

During his tenure, the bank went from strength to strength and Professor Ranasinghe believed in empowering the management of the Bank to make independent decisions while he remained a solid, supportive force behind.

This far-sighted thinking built a team of strong professionals finely honed to achieve the bank's objectives.

Prior to his retirement, Professor Ranasinghe served as the Chairman of Board Credit Committee, Board Capital Planning Committee, Board Strategic Planning Committee and as a member of Board Nomination Committee, Board Related Party Transactions Review Committee, Board Treasury Committee and Board IT Committee.

USD50 million COVID-19 Global Charitable Fund; and USD 200,000 from Standard Chartered Sri Lanka for the procurement of approximately 13,000 COVID-19 testing kits to assist in identifying suspected patients of the virus.

port program for clients including USD1 billion in financing for companies that provide goods and services to help the fight against COVID-19.

Sino-Lanka trade agreement on the cards

Chairman of the Sri Lanka Export Development Board (EDB), Prabash Subasinghe recently met Economic and Commercial Counsellor of China Embassy in Colombo, Yang Zuoyuan, to discuss opportunities available to enhance trade between the two countries.

The discussions were mainly focused on the importance of further strengthening of trade between the two countries in view of fully utilizing the trade potential that lies vastly untapped.

The discussion highlighted the early recoveries achieved by both the countries after the COVID 19 pandemic. According to the IMF, China's economic growth after the pandemic was predicted to be 8.2% which will give vast opportunities for its trading partners.

Benefits that could be accrued through preferential market access was discussed during the meeting where such tools could be used to narrow down the current trade gap between the two countries. In this regard, the activation of the negotiation process of the proposed China Sri Lanka FTA was highlighted as this will act as a catalyst to increase the trade between Sri Lanka and China by exploiting the opportunities available in the market.

Discussions were also held on China International Import Expo (CIIE) where the EDB organized Sri Lanka's participation from its inception in 2018. Arrangements are being made by the EDB to organize Sri Lanka's participation at CIIE 2020 as well. This event was an important move in China to open its market and promote trade, and was a platform for international cooperation for all countries to showcase their development achievements and discuss global economic and trade issues.

Importance of Chinese investment into Sri Lanka was also discussed taking advantage of the regulatory framework of both countries. This will also lead to increasing regional exports utilizing the existing FTA concessions and accelerate commercial ties.

China is a very important trading partner for Sri Lanka. Total merchandise trade between the two countries stood at USD 4,261 Mn in 2019. Being the top import destination of Sri Lanka, total imports from China to Sri Lanka recorded as USD 4,032 Mn. in 2019 with a share of 21% of total imports.

China was the 11th largest export destination for Sri Lanka. The export value in 2019 was US$ 229 Mn. The main export products were tea, activated carbon, electronic & electrical products, coir fiber, apparel, mineral sands, petroleum products, pneumatic & retreated rubber tires & tubes.

Sri Lankan exporters and producers mainly from sectors of apparel, spices, fresh fruits, and other food & agriculture products are expecting to explore this lucrative market. Nearly 400Mn people in China are considered middle-class income earners. This figure is expected to grow by 70% in 2030.

Only exports can salvage the economy from debt crisis – Minister Dr. Gunawardena

Trade Minister Dr. Bandula Gunawardena declared that it is only through increasing exports the Sri Lankan economy, which has been challenged by foreign debt servicing, can be salvaged to realize a better future for the country's next generation.

He expressed these sentiments at the Sri Lanka Export Promotion Vision Forum, organized by the Sri Lanka Export Development Board (EDB) in collaboration with the Ministry of Trade on August 29, at NSBM Green University. The forum was the first large-scale, public meeting the minister had with the nation's exporter community since assuming duties.

"A three-pronged strategy based on market diversification, product diversification, and shifting towards high-technology sectors is needed to achieve a significant increase in exports", Gunawardena stated.

He opined that a substantial amount of borrowing via sovereign bonds during the previous government has put the economy under severe stress with a large number of bullet payments falling due over the coming years. Meanwhile, the minister revealed that President Gotabaya Rajapaksa has gazetted the Export Development Council of Ministers in terms of the EDB Act, which has not been convened for more than 20 years, resolving a long-standing impediment in terms of addressing the issues of exporters expeditiously.

Gunawardena assured the exporters that the government would take prompt action to provide solutions to the difficulties faced by export industries with regard to sourcing raw materials from overseas due to the recent restrictions imposed on imports. He also pledged to establish an EXIM bank in the mold of a development bank in Sri Lanka like in other countries to facilitate access to capital for entrepreneurs. During the event, the representatives of the industry associations pointed out that the Department of Commerce, which currently comes under the purview of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, must be brought within the authority of the Trade Ministry. Minister agreed with the suggestion and promised to draw it to the government's attention.

A large number of exporters took part in the forum and the event was also graced by State Ministers Lasantha Alagiyawanna and D.V. Chanaka, Trade Ministry Secretary Badra Jayawardena, EDB Director-General Chitanjali Dissanayake, and BOI Director General Sanjaya Mohottala.

Expolanka supports post-COVID revival of air freight forwarding from Mattala

Leading integrated global logistics solutions provider, Expolanka Freight (EFL) announced the successful completion of two shipments of general and perishable goods out of Mattala Rajapakse International Airport (MRIA) utilizing converted incoming passenger repatriation flights last week.

Given the company's role as the first to move cargo out of MRJA in 2013 and first to start operating during the pandemic, EFL worked in alignment with national objectives to help secure a rapid post-COVID economic resurgence.

In the past month, EFL shipped 25 tonnes of general cargo from Colombo to Dubai to markets in the United States and European Union utilizing an Emirates repatriation flight on 9 August 2020.

Similarly, the company also facilitated the shipment of a further 4 tonnes of perishable fruits and vegetables supplied by YAS Lanka (Pvt) Ltd to Oman on 16

August 2020 via Salaam Air. Notably, domestic road freight between Mattala and BIA was facilitated using EFL's network of specialized operators for perishable goods and standard fleet for general cargo.

"EFL is proud to have been the first and only logistics specialist with the requisite agility, advanced expertise, and global network necessary to step up and directly support the Government's efforts to revitalize cargo operations out of MRJA. These operations send an important signal to markets globally, namely: that despite all challenges, Sri Lanka is opening up for exports.

"In achieving this important milestone, we are extremely grateful to the support provided by airport authorities and Customs officials, as well as our international partners for working with speed and agility to ensure we keep the Sri Lankan economy moving efficiently while ensuring the safe repatriation of our fellow citizens," EFL Managing Director, Saif Yussoof stated.

He further noted that the scaling up of cargo operations at MRJA would have major positive implications for the country's agriculture sector and related industries, given that the Mattala Airport was situated in close proximity to a major Agriculture Processing Zone, thus providing easy access to global markets for local producers of fruits, vegetables, and dairy products.

General activity at the MRJA following the outbreak of COVID-19 has been sharply on the rise with over 50 flights involving 2,188 passengers having touched down at the airport in June and July 2020 alone – primarily for the purposes of repatriation and international ship crew changes.

Point of View

Equity markets snapped a 5-consecutive week rally as the broad share index slipped ~62 points or 1.1% W-o-W on profit-taking amid a persistent foreign-sell off from domestic equities while the CBSL extended the debt moratorium offered to the Tourism Industry this week. Despite starting the week on a positive note with a marginal gain, profit-taking in large caps this week led the ASPI to shed ~65 points between Tuesday and Friday. Profit-taking in heavyweights JKH (-0.7% W-o-W), and COMB (-1.9% W-o-W) weighed down the index during the week while LOLC also recorded a W-o-W loss of 12.6% despite reporting an extraordinary gain in earnings (Rs. 37.2Bn in Q2'20 vs. Rs. 5.6Bn in Q1'19) for the June 2020 quarter, arising from the sale of its Cambodian investment in PRASAC. Of the ~79% of corporates that have released their quarterly earnings thus far, nearly 58% have reported a drop in earnings.

Meanwhile, activity levels on the Colombo Bourse also declined this week as average daily turnover for the week fell from Rs. 2.2Bn last week to Rs. 1.7Bn this week despite improved local institutional and HNI investor participation. Consequently, the contribution from crossings to total market turnover increased from 20% to 24% this week. Select Banking sector stocks (COMB, DFCC, NTB, & SAMP) accounting for 54% of total crossings while buying interest was also visible in JKH, AEL, TKYO, and LMF. Index losses were also attributable to the continued foreign equity sell-off with a net foreign outflow of Rs. 2.4Bn this week (cf. net outflow of Rs. 1.5Bn last week) amid heavy foreign selling in JKH, DFCC, MELS, and AEL. Consequently, foreign investors have sold off ~Rs. 31.8Bn this year. Markets in the week ahead are likely to look for cues from economic and political developments.

CBSL Extends Moratorium for Tourism Industry

The CBSL has extended the debt moratorium on capital and interest for the tourism industry by 6 months up to 31st March 2021, assuring that the extension will not cause any undue stress on the banking system given the low exposure levels to the tourism industry and the current capital buffers maintained by the Licensed Banks. Licensed Banks have also been requested to convert the capital and interest falling due during the moratorium period between Oct 2020 - Mar 2021 into a term loan.

According to the CBSL, the interest charged on the converted loan should be a maximum of the latest auction rate for 364-days Treasury Bills, available by 1 April 2021, plus 1% per annum while the repayment period of the loan should be a minimum of 2 years.

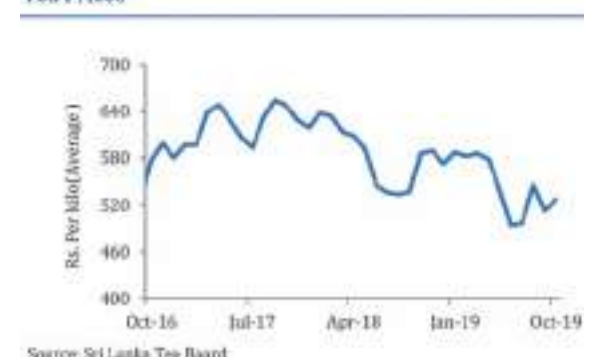

Meanwhile, the Monetary Board at its meeting last week also decided to extend the deadline for the 4% Working Capital Loan Scheme until the 30th of September. Loans approved under the "Subagya" Loan Scheme topped Rs. 100Bn as of 18th Aug, of which Rs. 68.6Bn was disbursed by the Licensed Banks. The Monetary Board noted that of the Rs.100Bn that was approved, 50% was provided to business in the Services sector, while business in the Industrial and Agriculture sector accounted for 34% and 16% respectively. Meanwhile, national inflation levels in July decelerated to 6.1% Y-o-Y (from 6.3% Y-o-Y in Jun'20) driven by lower food prices and a higher base effect during the same period last year. Consequently, Food inflation fell to 12.9% Y-o-Y in Jul'20 relative to 13.6% Y-o-Y in Jun'20. However, Non-food inflation over the month increased to 1.0% Y-o-Y in Jul'20 (cf. 0.8% Y-o-Y in Jun'20) as a result of price increase in 'Education', 'Housing', and 'Restaurant & Hotels' which were offset to an extent by lower 'Communication' costs (voice & internet charges).

Despite easing national headline inflation levels in July, the NCPI Core inflation (which reflects the underlying inflation in the economy by excluding volatile items such as food, energy, and transport) increased to its highest level since last December, reaching 4.5% Y-o-Y in Jul'20 relative to 4.4% Y-o-Y in Jun'20.

Despite the short term fluctuations, the CBSL expects inflation to remain broadly within the 4% - 6% in the near to medium term. Source: CBSL, Department of Consensus Sri Lanka, DailyFT

UBSL, SCCI assets SMEs in IP issues

Sabaragamuwa University Business Linkage Cell (UBLC) is passing a new milestone with its effort for the University-Industry Collaboration in partnering with the Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries (SCCI) to create an environment where the university researchers and SMEs can meet together for mutual research collaboration and innovation.

The Vice-Chancellor of the Sabaragamuwa University of Sri Lanka, Director/University Business Linkage Cell, CEO, and Past Presidents of Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries, university researchers and some owners of the SMEs in Ratnapura District participated in a meeting with stakeholders in this regard.

The University Business Linkage Cell of the Sabaragamuwa University of Sri Lanka was established with reference to the University Grants Commission Circular No.10/2016 from May 2018. The main role of this initiative is to transform the innovative ideas of the university into commercially viable products. Sabaragamuwa University has seven faculties with highly qualified academic staff with much intellectual excellence. In the technology transfer process, the UBLC transforms the ideas into intellectual property by filling the patents and other forms of Intellectual Property (IP) and with the help of industry partners, UBLC looks for commercial exploitation.

The UBLC of the Sabaragamuwa University of Sri Lanka is now stretching out helping hand to SMEs located in the region to address the issues faced by the SMEs with regard to intellectual property.

Professor Indunil Dayaratne pointed out that an alarmingly 99% percentage of Sri Lankan SMEs are not aware of and cannot identify the intellectual property (IP) or intellectual assets (IA) that they have within their business, or which of those assets they own.

The dearth of so-called awareness forgoes business opportunities that can be created with IP strategies. Further, he emphasized that the SME sector contributes more than 50% to GDP, however, the sector is not fully empowered to cater for the emerging knowledge-based economy of Sri Lanka amid the lack of IP knowledge.

In the rural sector, most of the SMEs have emerged from the business models with the traditional knowledge they have in the communities which pass through generation to generation. Moreover, the ignorance or lack of effort in the exploitation of traditional intellectual assets due to lack of awareness of IP strategies leads to the disappearance of valuable knowledge from those communities. For SMEs, if IP is unprotected, a good invention or creation may be lost and goes to the hands of larger competitors that are in a better position to commercialize the product or service at a more affordable price, leaving the original inventor or creator without any financial benefit or reward.

The IP protection for SMEs encompasses numerous value creation propositions such as inducing Potential investors, licensees require reliable information relating to ownership, scope, and status of IP within the business.

The UBLC of the SUSL is in capacity and has a keen interest to provide IP consultancy services to uphold the SME sector in Sabaragamuwa Province.

Aim of the Collaboration is to strengthen the university-industry collaboration in creating value in a knowledge-based economy in real sense.

Both parties agreed to form a committee to work on the task ahead. The representatives of the Chamber also agreed to organize an industry forum where SMEs and academia meet together for achieving mutual goals.

Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries, CEO, D.A. Ranasinghe said, "The Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries is willing to initiate an Industry Forum to support the inventors of Sabaragamuwa University of Sri Lanka by granting an opportunity to exhibit and demonstrate their inventions." Further, he stated that they extend their fullest cooperation to bring the university inventions to the marketplace.

Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries, Past President, Chamly Gunaseela said, "As Sabaragamuwa Chamber of Commerce and Industries our intention is to help add value to those inventions and make these investors into entrepreneurs, or create a platform for investors and inventors to meet, commercialize their products and bring them to local and international markets." Moreover, he stated that this initiative would allow inventors in Sabaragamuwa University and Sabaragamuwa Province to gain much-needed recognition and pave the way for them to scale up their inventions in a successful marketplace. In the end, the parties came to an agreement to move forward with the initiative for a success story with many happy endings for the inventors in the region.

Explanatory Notes

- These Financial Statements are prepared in accordance with LKAS 34 - Interim Financial Reporting laid down by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Sri Lanka. There were no changes to Accounting Policies and methods of computation since the publication of the Annual Report for the year ended December 31, 2019.
- On 11 March 2020, the World Health Organization declared the Coronavirus-COVID-19 outbreak to be a pandemic in recognition of its rapid spread across the globe with over 150 countries now affected and has resulted in disruptions to overall global economic activity affecting most industries and sub-sectors.
Due to its potential impact on Sri Lankan individuals and businesses, Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL) issued several circulars and guidelines introducing different relief measures to safeguard the affected. These relief measures include deferral of repayment terms of credit facilities, offering concessionary rates of interest to eligible loan products and waiving off certain fees and charges.
The Bank estimated Expected Credit Loss (ECL) as at 30 June 2020, based on the Probability of Default (PD) and Loss Given Default (LGD) computed as at 31 December 2019 in compliance with the guidance note issued by CA Sri Lanka on accounting implications of COVID-19. The significant accounting estimates impacted by these forecasts and associated uncertainties are predominantly related to expected credit losses and fair value measurement. A change to the Economic Factor Adjustment (EFA) was made to reflect the present economic conditions in line with the guidance issued by CA Sri Lanka and this would be reviewed further in the ensuing quarters. The Bank would reassess its portfolio post revaluation and changes would be made in impairment provisioning in line with requirements after the relief period.
The COVID-19 pandemic would increase the non-performing loans and advances of the bank and coupled with the negative impact arising from the debt moratorium relief granted by CBSL on interest income, fee income and cashflows, will result in lower profitability of the Bank. The quantification of these have not been fully captured in these financial statements.
- Total temporary differences arising from tax losses and tax credits amount to Rs. 1,442 Mn, resulting in a deferred tax asset of Rs. 403 Mn as at 30 June 2020. Based on internal assessments conducted by the Board of Directors, recognition of the deferred tax asset has been limited to Rs. 288 Mn. The unrecognized deferred tax asset as at 30 June 2020 was Rs. 115 Mn.
- The athena has proposed a reduction in the income tax rate applicable to the banking sector 28% to 24% which is pending formal approval from the parliament as an amendment to the Income Tax Act No 24 of 2017. As it is not considered as substantially enacted as at the reporting date, both income tax and deferred tax were calculated at the rate of 28% for the period ended 30 June 2020. Had the impact of the proposed reduction been adjusted the net deferred tax asset as at 30 June 2020 would have been reduced by Rs. 58 Mn.
- The Commissioner General of Inland Revenue (CGIR) issued a Notice of Assessment claiming Rs. 120 Mn for the Year of Assessment 2013/2014, disallowing some expenses and capital allowances claimed by the Bank, on the basis that it was not in commercial operation at the time and could not therefore make these deductions in arriving at Taxable Income for that Year of Assessment.
The Bank did not agree with the determination issued by the CGIR and therefore appealed to the Tax Appeals Commission. The Bank awaits the hearing of this appeal.
- There was no pending litigation of a material nature against the bank.
- All known expenses have been provided in these Interim Financial Statements.
- No circumstances have arisen since the reporting date which would require adjustment to or disclosure in the financial statements.

* Impairment Assessment

All the Corporate clients were assessed individually based on their historical payment patterns, Covid-19 economic impact to their sector and geographical area, expected recovery of the sector, financial strength of the entity, government and CBSL support and other holistic factors. Based on the assessment some borrowers were moved from stage one to stage two and some borrowers were moved from stage two to stage three due to expected cashflow impairment despite of their past due status.

The bank has calculated probability of Default (PD) as at 30 June 2020 and adjusted the Economic Factor Adjustment (EFA) to reflect the adverse impact to the economy when computing ECL. The Bank decided to increase the weightage assigned for worst case Scenario by 10% while reducing the weightages assigned for base case scenario and best-case scenario by 5% each respectively.

The portfolio level impairment assessment was carried out for the individual borrowers. However, in some scenarios management judgement was used to assess the reasonableness of the customer request of prolonged debt moratorium or deferral. The borrowers were allocated between stages based on their sector and management judgement. Based on the assessment some borrowers were moved from stage one to stage two and some borrowers were moved from stage two to stage three due to expected cashflow impairment.

Explanatory Notes
 (1) There were no changes to the Accounting Policies and methods of computation since last financial year.
 (2) The outbreak of COVID-19 has resulted in the disruption of business and economic activities and created uncertainty to the global and local economies. When conducting the business operations, the Bank has taken into account the guidelines and directions issued by the Government and the Central Bank of Sri Lanka. The memorandum has been given at the concessional rate during the moratorium period between two months and six months considering the direction issued by CBSL, and the payments are deferred until the end of the loan contractual period.
 (3) The assessment is being calculated and will be recognized in the financial statements. It resulted in a substantial impact to the Bank profitability for the six months ended 30/06/2020. Further, the Board will continue to monitor the implications and adjustments, if required.
 (4) The Bank has considered Probability of Default (PD), Loss Given Default (LGD) and Economic Factor Adjustment (EFA) computed as at December 31, 2019, in order to estimate Expected Credit Loss (ECL) as at June 30, 2020. Accordingly, revision has been made to compute ECL based on the available information as at 30/06/2020 by assigning weights for worst case scenario as 40% while for best case and best case scenarios each as 30%.

Word Power

It is Judy's talent to write that comes to her rescue at the beginning of the story and for the rest of her life. One of the trustees, known only as John Smith to Judy, reads her essays and decides to change his strategy of sponsoring only male orphans, seeing them through college, and pays instead, for Judy to attend college. His decision which will change Judy's future in wonderful ways, is based solely on the craftsmanship of her essays and letters.

ADITHA DISSANAYAKE
Writing is magic. If you believe deeply in what you write, if you love every minute you spend doing it, stringing words together, shifting them around, moving them back and forth, leaving them aside for some other day, reading each word, each sentence over and over until you walk around carrying whole paragraphs in your head. Writing is magic when others read your words and contact you with magical words of their own, when a series of letters between two strangers turn into a cherished friendship that ends only when "times chartot" stops for one of the correspondents.

An epistolary novel

It is ironic that the book I am writing about today, called an epistolary novel because the story unfolds through a series of letters was introduced to me through a letter sent by a friend who first wrote to me as a stranger after reading one of my articles here, in this space. Older and wiser than me, as time went by, she generously shared her experiences of growing up in the early years of the 20th century through a series of e-letters. It was in one such letter that she talked about a book she loved to read as a girl and magnanimously said she would post her copy to me if I had not read it already. Not wishing to tax her with the postage expenses I downloaded the e-book for free and read it till the early hours of the morning, enraptured by the voices that spoke to me through the lighted screen of my computer.

Lively voice

One voice belonged to my friend who sadly passed away before I had time to write this review, and the other, to the protagonist, Judy Abbot. Unlike most orphans found in the classics, from Oliver Twist to Anne of Greengables to Heidi, Judy relates her story in a lively voice, full of playfulness and good humour. Here's how she decides to rechristen herself as Judy, giving up the name the head of the orphanage picked up for her - Jerusha Abbott.

"I wish Mrs. Lippett would use a little more ingenuity about choosing babies' names. She gets the last names out of the telephone book—you'll find Abbott on the first page—and she picks the Christian names up anywhere; she got Jerusha from a tombstone. I've always hated it; but I rather like Judy. It's such a silly name. It belongs to the kind of girl I'm not—a sweet little blue-eyed thing, petted and spoiled by all the family, who romps her way through life without any cares. Wouldn't it be nice to be like that? Whatever faults I may have, no one can ever accuse me of having been spoiled by my family! But it's great fun to pretend I've been. In the future please always address me as Judy."

Writing skills

It is Judy's talent to write that comes to her rescue at the beginning of the story and for the rest of her life. One of the trustees, known only as John Smith to Judy, reads her essays and decides to change his strategy of sponsoring only male orphans, seeing them through college, and pays instead, for Judy to attend college. His decision which will change Judy's future in wonderful ways, is based solely on the craftsmanship of her essays and letters.

According to Mrs. Lippett, one of John Smith's requirements is that Jerusha write him regularly, care of his secretary, to report on her progress. Like a child asked to devour a bag of sweets, Judy jumps at the opportunity of writing to her benefactor, glad of finally having someone to share the exciting new life ahead of her in college. Having seen his shadow on the wall as he left the orphanage one evening, revealing him to be unusually tall and thin, Judy rechristens him as well (because she feels John Smith is a boring name) and addresses him with a new name in her letters. She imagines him to be an old man, overweight and suffering from illnesses related to old age and finds it appropriate to call him "Daddy" sometimes, in her letters. As he insists on anonymity and never replies, Judy wishes she could solve the mystery surrounding him. In one letter she writes, "I wish you'd come and take tea some day and let me see if I like you. But wouldn't it be dreadful if I didn't? However, I know I should."

Unbreakable rule

Judy loves to read, and she cherishes this opportunity in front of her to broaden her horizons within the portals of an institute of higher education. She tries valiantly to keep abreast with the other girls even though there is much that she does not know, having lived in the orphanage for eighteen years.

I have a new unbreakable rule: never, never to study at night no matter how many written reviews are coming up in the morning. Instead, I read just plain books - I have to, you know, because there are eighteen blank years behind me. You wouldn't believe, Daddy, what an abyss of ignorance my mind is; I am just realizing the depths myself. The things that most girls with a properly assorted family and a home and friends and a library know by absorption, I have never heard of.

But Judy survives, and like in a TV advertisement for beauty cream by the time she completes her studies she has turned into a charming young lady, intelligent and yearning to be independent. It comes as no surprise that Jervis Pendleton, her rich room-mate's uncle, finds her company so enjoyable. And it is easy to see why Jimmy McBride, the brother of her other roommate finds her fun to be with too. And as you turn the pages, you might begin to ask yourself why her benefactor sends her flowers and Christmas presents when he did not send them to the male orphans he sponsored in the previous years.

This then is the cue for me to say adieu till next week. If you wish to know whether Judy falls in love and if so, with whom, do read the book (you can find the e-book and the audiobook for free). All I am willing to say right now, is that, the title is slightly misleading. The story, most certainly, is not about a Pholcidae spider!

aditha.dissanayake@gmail.com

Webster's editor, Douglas Doty, described her as "an artist without the artistic temperament". Webster was renowned for her good humor, and her stories, even when addressing serious matters, were always accessible and keen, as were the quirky line drawings which often accompanied her work and became well loved in their own right.

JEAN WEBSTER

The letters that Jerusha Abbott, the protagonist of Jean Webster's Daddy-Long-Legs, writes to her patron vary from being comical to earnest. In one letter, Jerusha writes:
 You never answered my question and it was very important. ARE YOU BALD? I have planned exactly what you look like—very satisfactorily—until I reach the top of your head and then I am stuck. In both tone and theme, Daddy-Long-Legs and Webster's other works, such as When Patty Went to College and Dear Enemy, often reflected Webster's peculiar mixture of whimsy and activism. A "shark at English" and a prolific writer, she was also a suffragist and an active advocate of social reform for orphans and prisons.

Born Alice Jane Chandler Webster in Fredonia, New York in 1876, Webster came from a renowned family: her great uncle was Mark Twain, and her father was the publisher Charles Webster.

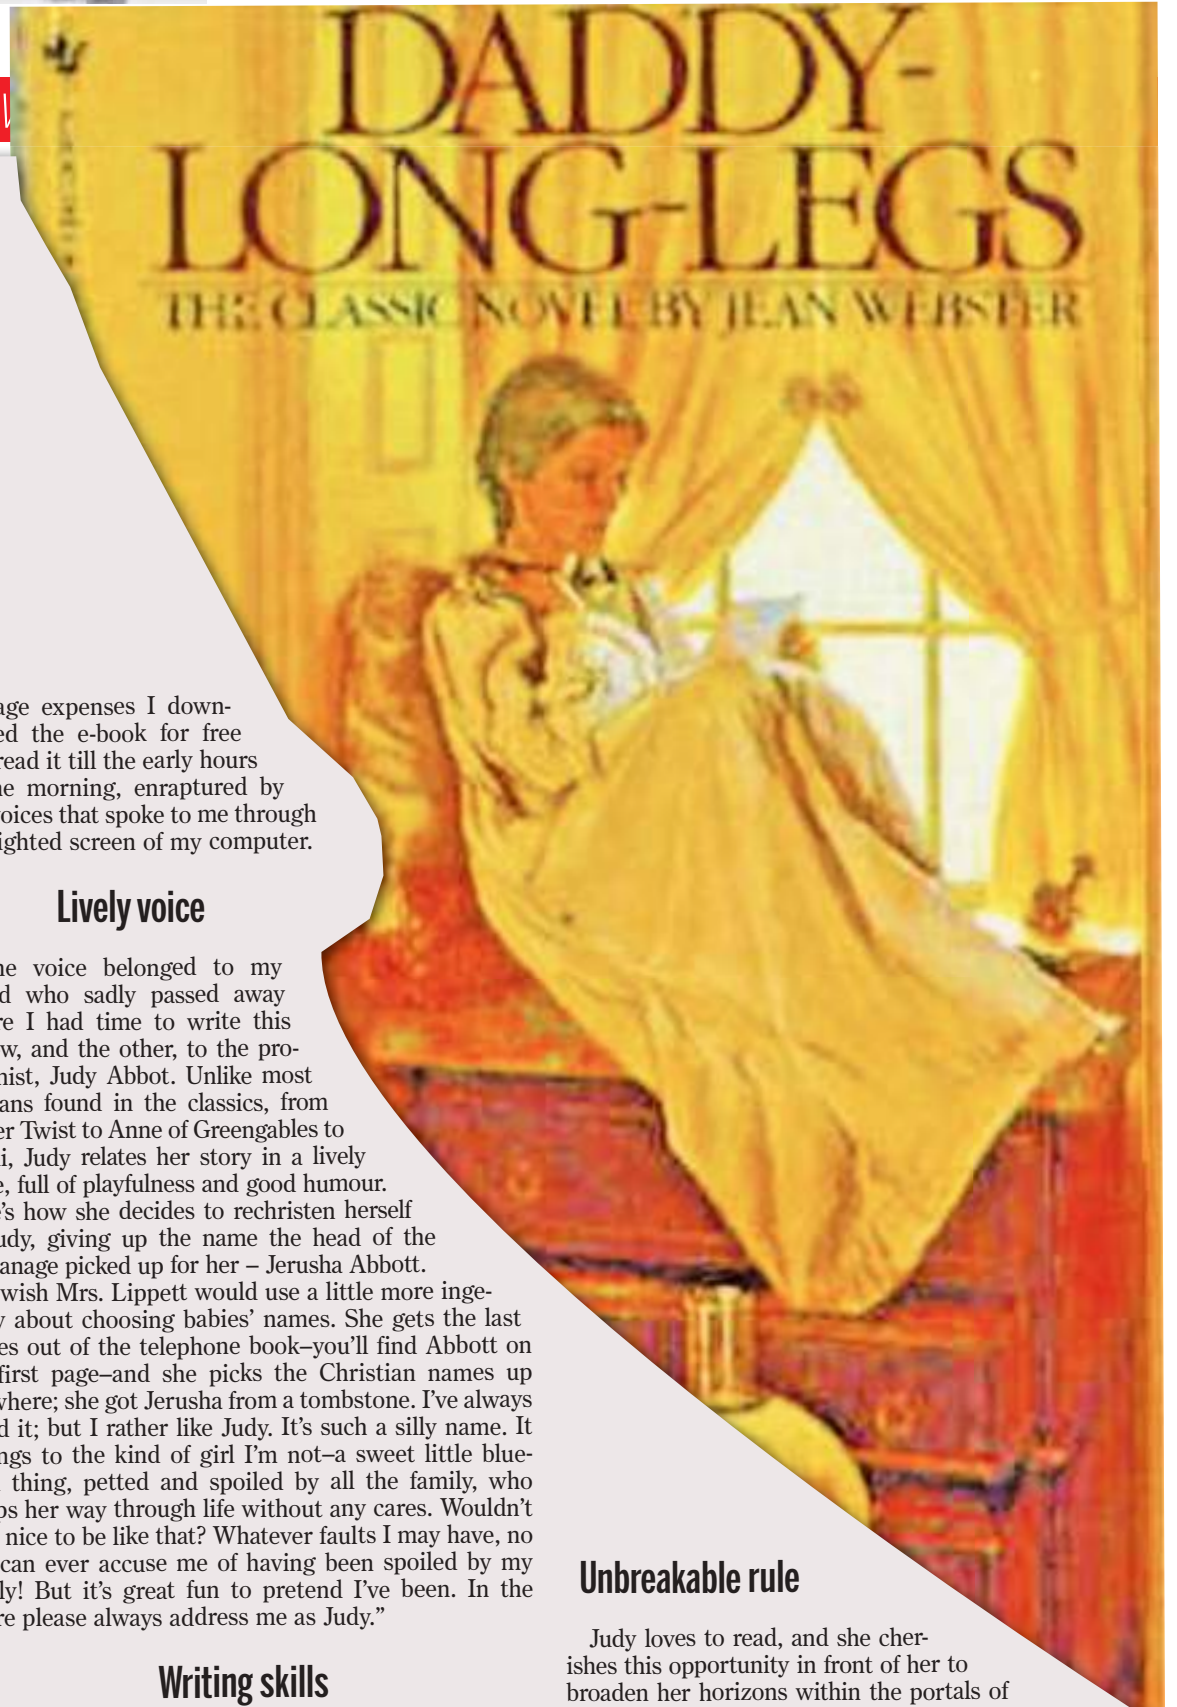

She changed her name to Jean after becoming roommates with another Alice at the Lady Jane Grey School. An avid traveler, Webster visited many countries in her lifetime with her best friend, Ethelyn McKinney. Webster was secretly engaged to Ethelyn's brother, Glenn Ford McKinney, for eight years; they kept the romance clandestine because McKinney was unhappily married.

Finally obtaining a divorce, McKinney married Webster in 1915. Around this time Daddy-Long-Legs was touring across the nation to successful reviews, and Webster completed her final novel Dear Enemy, a sequel to Daddy-Long-Legs.

Webster divided her time between New York City and Tymor Farm, in Union Vale near Vassar College.

In 1916, shortly after giving birth to a daughter, Webster died from complications of childbirth. She was 39, at the height of her success as a storyteller and social activist.

But we feel that instead of finding fault with anyone, it is an opportunity for us to double down and rise up. To help each other, to make the most of new and unexpected opportunities and to support our nation by earning foreign exchange".

Goodfolks works closely with SME businesses, individual entrepreneurs as well as start-ups across multiple industries to source unique products and introduce them to a larger audience through an online platform under the Goodfolks brand. # Amazing health benefits of Katu Anoda

ISHARA JAYAWARDANE
Annona muricata/ Katu Anoda/ Soursop (as it is known in English) is a species of the genus Annona. The Annona genus contains approximately 166 species. Sri Lanka has just four varieties.

Katu Anoda (soursop or annona muricata), Welu Anoda (sweetsop, sugar apple, annona squamosa), Matti anoda (custard apple, bullock's heart, annona reticulata), and the Cherimoya (annona cherimola). All four varieties are largely found in home gardens. Today Green Thumbs speaks to Institute of Indigenous Medicine, Department of Dravyaguna Vignana, Senior Lecturer, Dr. S.D. Hapuarachchi on Katu Anoda, the delicious fruit that is a boon to Sri Lanka coming to us from the other side of the world - West Indies and South America, introduced to the tropics by the Portuguese and Spanish in the 16th Century. It is a fruit that's popular for its delicious flavor and impressive health benefits.

Lankans who have eaten the fruit tell us that when you eat Katu Anoda it tastes a bit like a Pineapple while the soft central stem tastes a bit like a banana. However, when eating Katu Anoda it is like no other fruit! A healthy soursop can grow up to a foot long. When ripe, it is soft but firm, with a few blackish tinges on its pale green skin. It's best enjoyed whole, scooped with a spoon and deseeded, but also makes a wonderful smoothie mixed with honey with or without milk, or whipped up with plain yogurt or paired with ice cream. Unripe soursop makes a delicious spicy stir-fry, sliced and tempered with onions, garlic and chilis, curry leaves and curry powder, and simmered in light coconut milk.

Flavour

"The flavour of the fruit has been described as a combination of strawberry and pineapple, with sour citrus flavor contrasting with an underlying creamy flavor reminiscent of coconut or banana. Some people describe the flavor as a blend of pineapple and mango. The pulp is used to make fruit nectar, smoothies, fruit juice drinks, as well as candies, sorbets, and ice cream flavorings," said Hapuarachchi.

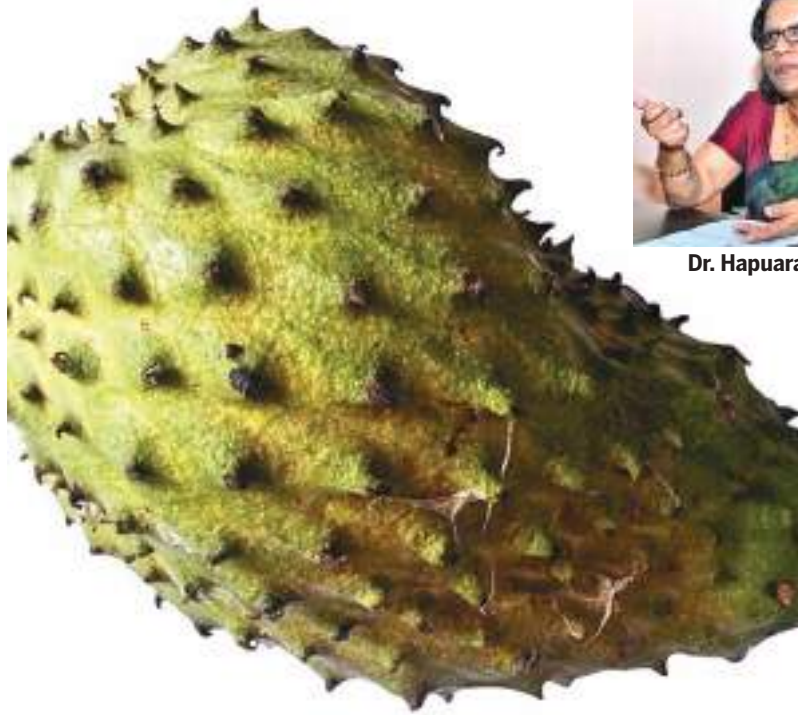

Hapuarachchi further pointed out that in Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela, and Ethiopia, it is a common fruit, often used for dessert as the only ingredient, or as an agua fresca beverage (Aguas frescas are light non-alcoholic beverages made from one or more fruits, cereals, flowers, or seeds blended with sugar and water).

"In Colombia and Venezuela, it is a fruit for juices, mixed with milk. In Cuba, a thick smoothie made of soursop pulp, milk and cane sugar goes by the name of cham-pola. Ice cream and fruit bars made of soursop are also very popular.

The seeds are normally left in the preparation, and removed while consuming, unless a blender is used for processing. In Indonesia, dodol sirsak, a sweetmeat, is made by boiling soursop pulp in water and adding sugar until the mixture hardens. In the Philippines, it is called guyabano, derived from the Spanish guanabana, and is eaten ripe, or used to make juices, smoothies, or ice cream.

Sometimes, they use the leaf in tenderizing meat. In Vietnam, this fruit is called Mang Cau Xiem (Siamese Soursop) in the South, or Mang Cau (Soursop) in the north, and is used to make smoothies, or eaten as is," pointed out Hapuarachchi.

Dr. Hapuarachchi.

HEALTH BENEFITS OF KATU ANODA/SOURSOP

High in Antioxidants - Antioxidants are compounds that help neutralize harmful compounds called free radicals, which can cause damage to cells. Test-tube studies show that soursop is high in antioxidants, which may help prevent cell damage and could lower the risk of chronic disease. One test-tube study looked at the antioxidant properties of soursop and found that it was able to effectively protect against damage caused by free radicals.

It can help fight bacteria - Test-tube studies show that soursop has antibacterial properties and may be effective against some strains of bacteria responsible for disease, although more studies are needed.

In one test-tube study, extracts of soursop with varying concentrations were used on different types of bacteria known to cause oral diseases. Soursop was able to effectively kill off multiple types of bacteria, including strains that cause gingivitis, tooth decay and yeast infections.

It could reduce inflammation - Animal studies show that soursop extract could reduce inflammation and may be useful in the treatment of certain inflammatory disorders.

It may help stabilize blood sugar levels - Some animal studies have found that soursop extract could significantly reduce blood sugar levels.

Many parts of the fruit are used medicinally, including the leaves, fruit and stems.

POSSIBLE HEALTH BENEFITS

Elsewhere in the world, the Anoda has other curative uses. According to Materia Medica of British Guiana, a drunk man will sober up if his head is rubbed with soursop leaves that have been immersed in a bowl of water into which the juice of couple of limes has been squeezed.

- In the Netherlands Antilles, the leaves are stuffed into pillows or strewn on beds for a good night's sleep.

- In Africa, young Anoda shoots and leaves are used to remedy gall bladder ailments, coughs, catarrh, diarrhea, dysentery and indigestion

- The leaves are said to have a cooling effect and also aid in the delivery in childbirth.

- Anoda leaf compresses are applied on inflamed skin and swollen feet. Chewed leaves mixed with saliva are used to get rid of scar tissue.

- A poultice of mashed leaves is used to cure eczema and other skin afflictions as well as rheumatism.

NUTRITIONAL VALUE OF KATU ANODA

A typical serving of this fruit (Katu Anoda) is low in calories yet high in several nutrients like fiber and vitamin C. A 3.5-ounce (100-gram) serving of raw soursop contains: Calories: 66 Protein: 1 gram Carbs: 16.8 grams Fiber: 3.3 grams Vitamin C: 34% of the RDI Potassium: 8% of the RDI Magnesium: 5% of the RDI Thiamine: 5% of the RDI Soursop also contains a small amount of niacin, riboflavin, folate and iron.

Natural and homemade insecticides

Oil spray insecticide

A homemade insecticide made from vegetable oil mixed with a mild soap can have a devastating effect on certain troublesome insects, such as aphids, mites, thrips. To make a basic oil spray insecticide, mix 1 cup of vegetable oil with 1 tablespoon of soap (cover and shake thoroughly), and then when ready to apply, add 2 teaspoons of the oil spray mix with 1 quart of water, shake thoroughly, and spray directly on the surfaces of the plants which are being affected by the little pests. The oil coats the bodies of the insects, effectively suffocating them, as it blocks the pores through which they breathe.

Soap spray insecticide

A very similar homemade pesticide to the oil spray is a soap spray, which is also effective for controlling mites, aphids, whiteflies, beetles, and other hungry little insects. To make a basic soap spray insecticide, mix 1 1/2 teaspoons of a mild liquid soap (such as castile soap) with 1 quart of water, and spray the mixture directly on the infested surfaces of the plants. A soap spray insecticide works in a similar fashion as an oil spray pesticide, and can be applied as necessary (though it is always recommended to NOT apply it during the hot sunny part of the day, but rather in the evenings or early mornings).

Neem oil insecticide

An oil extracted from the seeds of the neem tree is a powerful natural insecticide, capable of disrupting the life cycle of insects at all stages (adult, larvae, and egg), making it a great resource for the organic gardener. Neem oil acts as a hormone disruptor and as an "antifeedant" for insects that feed on leaves and other plant parts. Neem oil is biodegradable and is nontoxic to pets, birds, fish, and other wildlife, and is effective against a variety of common garden insect pests, as well as being a natural fungicide that can combat powder mildew and other fungal infections on plants. It can be found at many garden stores or natural foods markets. To use neem oil as an insecticide, either follow the instructions on the bottle, or start out with a basic mixture of 2 teaspoons neem oil and 1 teaspoon of mild liquid soap shaken thoroughly with 1 quart of water, and then sprayed on the affected plant foliage. Neem oil can also be used preventatively by spraying the leaves of plants that are often ravaged by pests, before they're actually infested.

Diatomaceous earth as a natural pesticide

This natural substance with a somewhat unwieldy name is made from a sedimentary rock created by fossilized algae (diatoms), and which is a rather abundant resource is said to make up 26% of the earth's crust by weight). Diatomaceous earth has a number of uses in and around the home, and acting as a natural insecticide is just one of them. This material works not by poisoning or smothering the insects, but instead by virtue of its abrasive qualities and its affinity for absorbing the lipids (a waxy substance) from insects' exoskeleton, which then dehydrates them to death. Diatomaceous earth is often available at garden stores, although many times only in large bags, so if you've got a small yard, consider splitting it with a neighbor. To apply, simply dust the ground around your plants, or even sprinkle it on the foliage, where it will help control snails and slugs as well as other crawling insects. Due to its dried nature, in order to be an effective natural pesticide, diatomaceous earth needs to be reapplied after every rain.

Garlic insecticide spray

Garlic is well-known for its pungent aroma, which is delectable to some and yet repellent to others, and it is this strong scent that comes into play when used as a natural insecticide. Actually, it's not really clear if garlic spray and chile spray (below) are actually insecticides or are more likely insect repellents, but either way, these common kitchen ingredients can be used to knock down, or even knock out, insect infestations in the garden. To make a basic garlic spray, take 2 whole bulbs (not just 2 cloves) and puree them in a blender or food processor with a small amount of water. Let the mixture sit overnight, then strain it into a quart jar, adding 1/2 cup of vegetable oil (optional), 1 teaspoon of mild liquid soap, and enough water to fill the jar. To use this homemade insecticide, use 1 cup of mixture with 1 quart of water and spray liberally on infested plants.

Chile pepper insecticide spray

Similar to garlic spray, chile pepper spray is a great homemade natural insect repellent that can be used for a variety of different pests. Chile spray can be made from either fresh hot peppers or chile pepper powder. To make a basic chile spray from pepper powder, mix 1 tablespoon of chile powder with 1 quart of water and several drops of mild liquid soap. This mixture can be used full-strength on the leaves of affected plants. To make chile spray from fresh chile peppers, blend or puree 1/2 cup of peppers with 1 cup of water, then add 1 quart of water and bring to a boil. Let sit until cooled, then strain out the chile material, add several drops of liquid soap to it and spray as desired. [Caution: Hot chile peppers can be very potent on humans as well, so be sure to wear gloves when handling them, and keep any sprays made from them away from eyes, nose, and mouth.] -Treehugger

Be as healthy as a gardener!

If you really want to reap the benefits of nature, try gardening, as opposed to simply stepping outside. Here are 5 ways gardening is good for your health:

- It's good for you physically: while it might not seem like you're exercising, gardening is, in fact, a great form of low-resistance exercise. As well as toning the arms and legs, it gently works the abdominal and thigh muscles through bending and stretching movements that are part and parcel to gardening. On top of that, it improves balance and mobility.

- It enhances self-esteem and confidence: nurturing something and watching it grow naturally boosts feelings of pride and accomplishment, which in turn enhances self-esteem levels.

- It boosts your immune system: research published in Science Daily found that working in the garden strengthens the immune system because of the beneficial bacteria present in soil. It can also alleviate allergy symptoms, University of Copenhagen research discovered.

- It promotes mindfulness: the reason we always feel so good when surrounded by nature is because we are able to reconnect with both ourselves and our surroundings. By touching and working the earth through gardening, you enhance this connection and create inner peace. Stress and anxiety naturally lower in this kind of environment.

- It keeps you focused: a study published in the Journal of Alzheimer's Disease found that gardening can reduce the effects of Alzheimer's by up to 50%. Other research has explored the benefits of horticulture therapy on the happiness of dementia patients. -mindfood.com

Men in Black International

NO SOUL

RUWINI JAYAWARDANA

Dubbed the most successful buddy comedy in cinema history 'Men in Black' starring Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones is a movie which is difficult to measure up to because of its stellar success.

Nearly two decades later a sequel to the hit had been made under the title 'Men in Black: International'. Starring the charismatic Chris Hemsworth and the infectious Tessa Thompson, one would have thought that the spin off would have done justice to its predecessor, however as the action unfolds on the wide screen you cannot help noting that it is the script and dialogues which lets the film down.

Aliens and new technologies have been hot topics for story telling for many years. One of the strengths in 'Men in Black: International' is that it has managed to adapt to modern times. This was not the 1997 decade that we see on screen but a much more modern and advanced set up.

The story begins when a new recruit named Molly aka agent M lands in MiB London. She becomes the junior partner to H, a fallen hero in the company. Years ago H had managed to save the world from being invaded by a parasitic intergalactic force known as the Hive. However today he has turned into an irresponsible, and irritating blockhead. The two are soon plunged into an adventure which takes them on a series of journeys around the globe in an effort to avert total destruction.

The structure of the story relates how intent the filmmakers are on reassembling the 21st action movies. From the 'James Bond' series to 'Mission Impossible', this change of scenes allows them to show off visual gadgets, enticing backdrops and battles studded with visual effects. However rather than wowing the viewers, these techniques tire them out as there is fast pacing action in every scene. As we went from scene to scene, it felt like an MIB spy thriller evoking the undercover missions, arms dealers, shady informants, potential agency mole to expose, exotic locales, and crackling banter of that genre, and that's something none of the sequels have done before.

The jokes too feel forced rather than original. It feels like someone is trying to tell a joke which has lost its luster. All the pieces of the puzzle are there but they don't seem to fit in right.

Two Marvel biggies lead the cast. Hemsworth

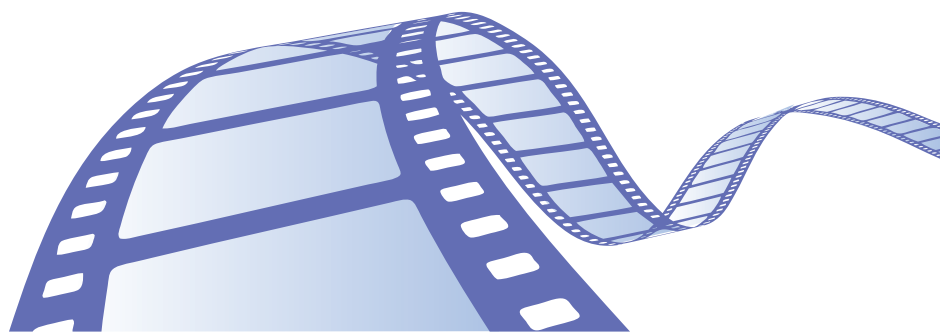

Missing from 'MISSION IMPOSSIBLE'

'Mission Impossible: Rogue Nation' is screening for a limited time at Scope Cinemas at Colombo City Center, Liberty Cinema, Majestic Cineplex, and PVR

TOM CRUISE
MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE
ROGUE NATION

Jeremy Renner made a big splash by joining the ensemble of the 'Mission Impossible' series, so why hasn't he shown up since 'Rogue Nation'?

Over the course of 24 years (and counting), the Mission: Impossible franchise has evolved into one of the most enduring and surprising ongoing major movie series. Each new 'Mission Impossible' movie brought on board a new director to bring their own flair to the project but the focus was always on Tom Cruise's Ethan Hunt and the astounding stunts the actor pulled off himself. As the movies have passed, the formula has been set in stone for 'Mission Impossible' Lavish set-pieces, a complex but ultimately easy-to-ignore plot, sprinkles of backstory for Hunt, and an ensemble of familiar faces acting as Hunt's team. Screen Rant

REEL REVIEWS

Sequel plans scrapped!

'Terminator Genisys' is screening for a limited time at Scope Cinemas at Colombo City Center, Liberty Cinema, Majestic Cineplex, and PVR

Despite the Terminator franchise now being comprised of six movies, only the first two are spoken of highly, with each movie chasing that same high ever since. One such attempt was 2015's 'Terminator Genisys', which, while hinting at things to come, ended after one movie. Well, Patrick Lussier, who co-wrote Terminator: Genisys alongside Laeta Kalogridis, has been discussing the movie, and what would have happened had Genisys been a success.

"We wrote like two drafts of the next one, the direct sequel, and had an outline for the third one, what that would be, that answered all the questions that were presented in Genisys and brought it back around and closed it all off."

While Terminator: Genisys relied heavily on the previous installments (often to its detriment), Lussier added that the sequels would have gone a long way toward separating themselves from the rest of the franchise and branching off in their own direction.

"They were introducing new characters. They dealt more with how the future and where Skynet comes from and what that sort of time loop is. You know, the Matt Smith character. It became much more of a focus, so they were probably a little trippier and stood away from T2 a little more. Started having their own identity. There's sort of an interesting escaping the fatalistic part of it, how it opened was very cool...who knows? Maybe one day they'll release it as a comic or something."

This is not the first time that we have gotten a glimpse at what shape the sequels would have taken, with Terminator: Genisys star Jason Clarke saying some time ago that they would have delved into John Connor's transformation into a Terminator. "What I remember was that second one was going to be about John's journey after he was taken by Skynet," Clarke said at the time, "like going down to what he became; half machine, half man. That's where the second one was going to start, and that's about all I knew."

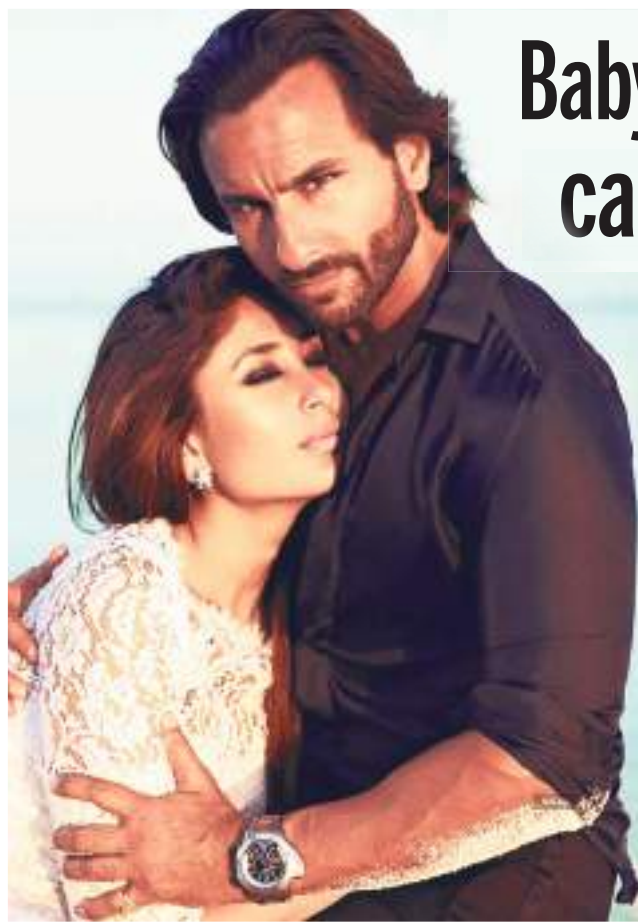

Terminator Genisys follows the first Terminator's protagonist, Kyle Reese, a soldier in a post-apocalyptic war against Skynet, who is sent from 2029 to 1984 to avert Sarah Connor's death. When Kyle arrives in the past however, he discovers that the timeline has been altered, and that Sarah has been raised by a reprogrammed Terminator. The movie involves a lot of time travel shenanigans, which include our intrepid duo travelling to 2017, as well as the franchise's hero, John Connor, being transformed into a Terminator himself. Despite the return of Arnold Schwarzenegger, Emilia Clarke and Jai Courtney failed to live up to the legacy of original stars Linda Hamilton and Michael Biehn in their respective roles, with the movie ultimately falling flat in almost every respect.

While the proposed sequels certainly sound like they would have tried to etch out their own identity within the famous sci-fi franchise, it is perhaps time to leave the Terminator alone for the foreseeable future. This comes to us courtesy of The Production Meeting podcast. Movie Web as Thor and Thompson as Valkyrie created waves in 'Thor: Ragnarok'. These two actors who have an abundance of acting talents under their belts could have rekindled their magic together if they had been given a project which is worthy of their skills. Thompson's character is a great re-introduction to this hidden world, a woman who has devoted her life to finding and becoming a Man in Black. It seems to be a pity that with all the resources in hand, Gary Gray has not made use of them.

Baby bump to be camouflaged!

Kareena Kapoor Khan and Saif Ali Khan made headlines once again after they officially broke the news of expecting a second child. The two make for one of the most adorable couples in B-town and fans obviously could not stop gushing over the news. But, just like her first pregnancy, it seems that Kareena is in no mood to take a break from work.

A report in a leading daily claims that the actress will complete the shooting of 'Laal Singh Chaddha' in which she's paired up with Aamir Khan. A source from the film revealed, "Since Bebo's baby bump is visible, it will be concealed using VFX. She has 100 days of shoot left and is expected to join the team in September-October to wrap her portions."

Aamir and Kareena were shooting for 'Laal Singh Chaddha' since last year but the work got halted since this March due to the coronavirus pandemic. Recently, Aamir also paid a visit to Turkey in order to scout new locations for the film. Filmfare

Villain of 'No Time To Die' revealed

The official James Bond Instagram page has introduced the character portrayed by Rami Malek in the upcoming 007 adventure, 'No Time To Die', along with an image.

Malek plays the villain in the film, and the latest introduction reveals his character is called Safin. No other detail is out yet.

"Are you ready to meet Safin (Rami Malek) in No Time To Die?" read the caption alongside the image.

In the photo, Malek is seen standing in a forest. The caption was tagged with the film's name, #No-Time To Die.

Daniel Craig returns as the dapper British spy James Bond one last time in 'No Time To Die', the 25th film in the 007 franchise. Co-starring with Craig and Malek are Lea Seydoux, who reprises her role of Dr. Madeleine Swann from the 2015 release, 'Spectre'. Among other cast members who return from recent films in the franchise are Ben Whishaw as Q, Jeffrey Wright as Felix Leiter, Christoph Waltz as Blofeld, Ralph Fiennes as M, and Naomie Harris as M's secretary Moneypenny.

Ana de Armas and Lashana Lynch are new additions to the Bond family in 'No Time To Die'.

The film was slated for an April 2020 release, but has been pushed back owing to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic that has forced the closure of cinema theatres all over the world. As of now, the film is scheduled for a November release. IANS

Scientists to resolve Earth's water mystery

Water covers 70 percent of the Earth's surface and is crucial to life as we know it, but how it got here has been a long-standing scientific debate. The puzzle was a step closer to being solved Thursday after a French team reported in the journal Science they had identified which space rocks were responsible, and suggested our planet has been wet ever since it formed. Cosmo-chemist Laurette Piani, who led the research, told AFP the findings contradicted the prevalent theory that water was brought to an initially dry Earth by far-reaching comets or asteroids. Asteroids are rocky celestial objects that orbit the sun; comets are made of ice and dust, and also orbit the sun; and meteoroids are much smaller objects, mostly fragments of asteroids and comets. According to early models for how the Solar System came to be, the large disks of gas and dust that swirled around the Sun and eventually formed the inner planets were too hot to sustain ice. This would explain the barren conditions on Mercury, Venus and Mars — but not our blue planet, with its vast oceans, humid atmosphere and well-hydrated geology. Scientists therefore theorized that the water came along after, and the prime suspects were meteorites known as carbonaceous chondrites that are rich in hydrous minerals. But the problem was that their chemical composition doesn't closely match our planet's rocks. The carbonaceous chondrites also formed in the outer Solar System, making it less likely they could have pelted the early Earth. Another group of meteorites, called enstatite chondrites, are a much closer chemical match, containing similar isotopes, or types, of oxygen, titanium and calcium. This indicates they were Earth's and the other inner planets' building blocks.

However, because these rocks formed close to the Sun, they had been assumed to be too dry to account for Earth's rich reservoirs of water. To test whether this was really true, Piani and her colleagues at Centre de Recherches Petrographiques et Geochimiques (CRPG, CNRS/Université de Lorraine) used a technique called mass spectrometry to measure the hydrogen content in 13 enstatite chondrites. The rocks are now quite rare, making up only about two percent of known meteorites in collections, and it is hard to find them in pristine, uncontaminated condition. The team found that the rocks contained enough hydrogen in them to provide Earth with at least three times the water mass of its oceans — and possibly much more. They also measured two isotopes of hydrogen, because the relative proportion of these is very different from one celestial object to another. "We found the hydrogen isotopic composition of enstatite chondrites to be similar to the one of the water stored in the terrestrial mantle," said Piani, comparing it to a DNA match. The isotopic composition of the oceans was found to be consistent with a mixture containing 95 percent of water from the enstatite chondrites — more proof these were responsible for the bulk of Earth's water. The authors further found that the nitrogen isotopes from the enstatite chondrites are similar to Earth's — and proposed these rocks could also be the source of the most abundant component of our atmosphere. Piani added that research doesn't exclude later addition of water by other sources like comets, but indicates that enstatite chondrites contributed significantly to Earth's water budget at the time the planet formed. The work "brings a crucial and elegant element to this puzzle" wrote Anne Peslier, a planetary scientist for NASA, in an accompanying editorial. (AFP)

Mars - the Red Planet

China's first Mars mission on way

An artist's impression of a future Mars base

The probe of China's first Mars mission Tianwen-1 flew a total of 100 million kilometers by 10:08 a.m. on Friday, according to China National Space Administration (CNSA). The probe is now in normal flight condition. Multiple payloads, including the Mars magnetometer, mineralogy spectrometer, high resolution camera, and medium resolution camera, have completed self-tests. Launched on July 23, the probe was sent into the Earth-Mars transfer trajectory by the country's Long March-5 carrier rocket. It becomes an artificial planet to circle the Sun together with the Earth and the Moon, flying away from the Earth and approaching the red planet. It is now 10.75 million kilometers away from the Earth after 36 days' travel. When arriving at Mars, the probe will be about 195 million kilometers from the Earth with an actual flight distance of roughly 470 million kilometers. During the flight, the probe has successfully captured a photo of the Earth and the Moon, and completed the first mid-course orbital correction.

It is expected to carry out deep-space maneuvers and multiple mid-course corrections later, and conduct orbiting, landing and roving missions after approaching the Mars orbit. The Tianwen-1 is scheduled to make a second orbital correction in September to ensure that the probe is flying accurately in its preset orbit. (CGTN)

NASA to explore Trojan Asteroids

NASA's first mission to explore the Trojan asteroids is one step closer to launch. The Discovery Program's Lucy mission passed a critical milestone and is officially authorized to transition to its next phase. This major decision was made after a series of independent reviews of the status of the spacecraft, instruments, schedule, and budget. The milestone, known as Key Decision Point-D (KDP-D), represents the official transition from the mission's development stage to delivery of components, testing, assembly, and integration leading to launch. During this part of the mission's life cycle, known as Phase D, the spacecraft bus (the structure that will carry the science instruments) is completed, the instruments are integrated into the spacecraft and tested, and the spacecraft is shipped to NASA's Kennedy Space Center in Florida for integration with the launch vehicle. "Each phase of the mission is more exciting than the last," says Lucy Principal Investigator Hal Levison of Southwest Research Institute in Boulder, CO. "While, of course, Lucy still has several years and a few billion miles to go before we reach our real goal — exploring the never-before-seen Trojan asteroids — seeing this spacecraft come together is just incredible." Assembly, Testing and Launch Operations (ATLO) began on schedule last week at Lockheed Martin Space in Littleton, Colorado, despite many unforeseen challenges related to the coronavirus pandemic. The schedule was revised to allow for later integration of components that were delayed due to COVID-19 restrictions. "This team has been truly incredible," says Lucy Project Manager Donya Douglas-Bradshaw, from NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland. "Building a spacecraft is never easy, but seeing the team persevere through all of the challenges that they have encountered is inspiring. We now have a spacecraft structure in the Lockheed Martin high bay and a team ready to install the instruments and components." The oxidizer tank has already been integrated with the spacecraft, and the instrument integration starts in October. All spacecraft assembly and testing will be completed by the end of July 2021, when the spacecraft will be shipped to Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Florida in preparation for the launch window opening on October 16, 2021. After launch, Lucy will have a long cruise phase before it arrives at its first target. Lucy is flying out to the distance of Jupiter to make close fly-bys past a record-breaking number of asteroids, encountering the first of eight targets in April 2025 and the final binary pair of asteroids in March 2033. The next major milestone is the Mission Operation Review, scheduled in October 2020, which assesses the project's operational readiness and its progress towards launch. Southwest Research Institute in Boulder, Colorado, is the principal investigator institution for Lucy. NASA Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland provides overall mission management, systems engineering, and safety and mission assurance. Lockheed Martin Space near Denver is building the spacecraft and will perform spacecraft flight operations. Instruments will be provided by Goddard, the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Laurel, Maryland, and Arizona State University. (SciTech Daily)

Old NASA Satellite set to "return" to Earth

We all eventually have to retire, but some of us get to do so in a blaze of glory. Over the weekend, one NASA satellite is set to retire — or die — by burning up in the atmosphere as it falls back to Earth. Talk about a glorious final goodbye.

"The OGO 1 spacecraft, is the first of a series of six Orbiting Geophysical Observatories. It was launched to conduct diversified geophysical experiments to obtain a better understanding of the earth as a planet and to develop and operate a standardized observatory-type satellite," read NASA's page on the soon to be retired satellite. OGO 1 was launched back in September 1964 and successfully gathered data until 1969. It was officially decommissioned in 1971 but continued to stay in space after that, zooming around Earth on a two-day orbit.

You have to give it credit. It lasted pretty long in space as all of its siblings have already returned to Earth with the latest entering the atmosphere back in 2011. The other satellites were launched in 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, and 1969, all after OGO 1 had already found its place around our blue planet.

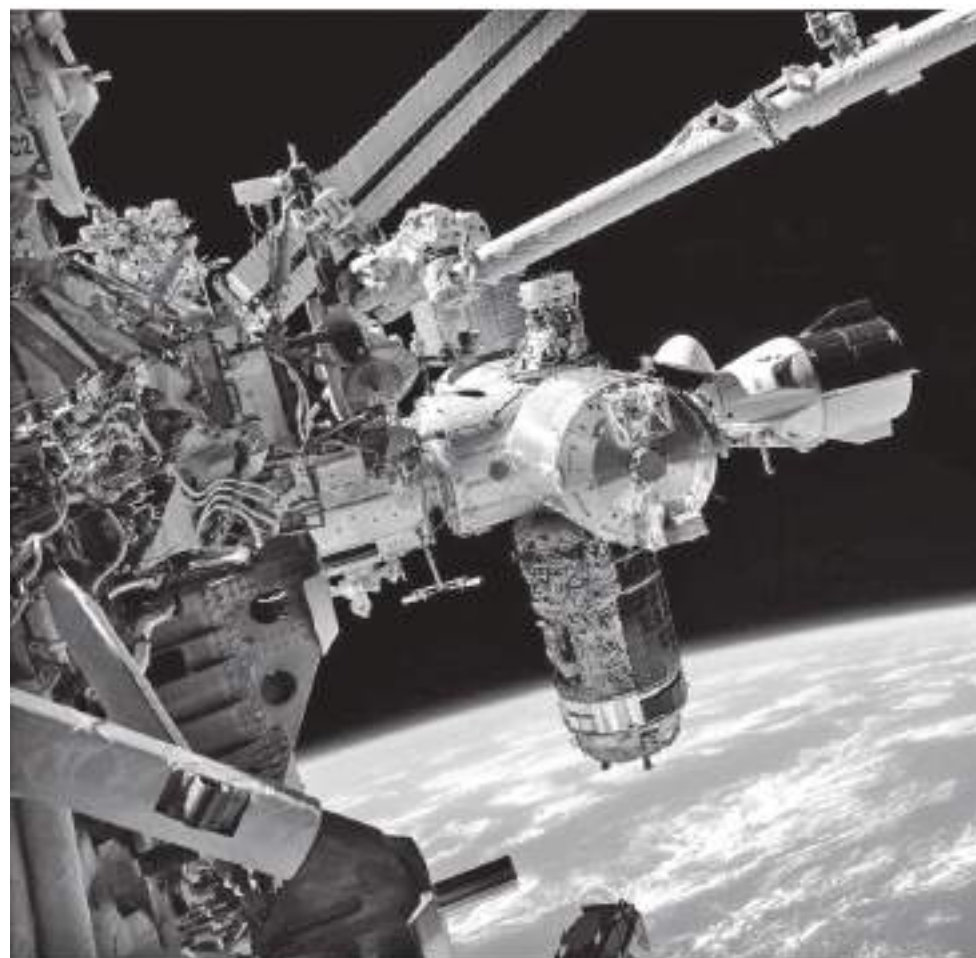

Observations from the University of Arizona's Catalina Sky Survey (CSS) and the University of Hawaii's Asteroid Terrestrial-impact Last Alert System (ATLAS) both detected OGO 1 on its way to Earth and researchers at the CSS, the Center for Near-Earth Object (NEO) Studies at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Southern California and the European Space Agency's NEO Coordination Center successfully identified the satellite.

They estimated that OGO-1 will reenter Earth's atmosphere, decomposing in the process, on Saturday, Aug. 29, 2020, at about 5:10 p.m. EDT, over the South Pacific approximately halfway between Tahiti and the Cook Islands.

If you are worried that the satellite may collide with the Earth, rest assured its reentry is perfectly safe.

"The spacecraft will break up in the atmosphere and poses no threat to our planet — or anyone on it — and this is a normal final operational occurrence for retired spacecraft," said NASA officials in their update on OGO 1. Goodbye OGO 1!
