Pottuvil Fishing Dispute

REPORT

This is a dispute that has arisen between the local beach seine fishermen of Pottuvil who have formed themselves into a society known as the Kathiriya Fishing Society and the migrant oru fishermen from Tangalla and adjoining villages regarding fishing and the beaching of fishing boats in Ulla Bay and the capture of bait by migrant fishermen in the Ulla Bay precincts

The Society was constituted in 1942 with 20 members all of the Muslim community residing at Pottuvil The 20 foundation members are not members of the Society now. About 80 men have, at various times, been members of the Society and have resigned and new members have joined In short, though the name of the Society has remained constant, it is a fluctuating body Prior to 1942, the inhabitants of Pottuvil did not indulge in fishing as an occupation but have thrown hand nets into the sea adjoining the beach during the season when fish is plentiful and have caught fish for personal consumption Now the Society uses the Karavalai (Madel) net in the sea by the beach of Ulla Bay and catches fish as an occupation. The Society owns a boat in which the members go out into the sea off the beach and lay their net at a particular spot free from rocks. The Karavalai net cannot be used at a spot where there are rocks. The Society has a wadiya on the beach where the net and other materials are housed.

The boat of the Society is beached in front of this wadıya, and by that portion of the sea where they do their fishing The Society commences its fishing at about 7 a.m. and ends by about 10 or 11 am. Sometimes when fish is plentiful, fishing may be continued till about 2 pm. The migrant fishermen, also a fluctuating body, indulge in deep sea fishing. For many years, from the time the oldest witness can remember, these migrant fishermen have visited this coast during the months of January to March for a period of about 75 days and pulsued their occupation. They used to come in about 10 to 25 or 30 boats which are beached at Ulla Bay to the South of the spot where the Society's boat is beached at some distance away On permits obtained from the Government Agent they would erect wadiyas sufficient for their number close to their boats on Crown land. They house their utensils and reside in them during the season I have visited the spot It is a sheltered portion of the Bay near which there is a coconut grove, a well and good water for their use. It is possible to approach this spot by van or lorry and traders make use of these vehicles to remove what they purchase from the fishermen From all points of view it is an advantageous spot The evidence is that this spot has been used by the migrant fishermen for many years. Bait is caught among the rocks by the northern and southern promontories of this bay A number of boats used to go out early in the morning at about 430 or 5 a m to the one or the other of these promontories. When the bat has been caught, the boats which go to the high seas push off while the others return to the beach at any time between 9 and 11 a m. The boats which go to the high seas return by 3 or 4 pm Parties are agreed with regard to the facts as set out above

With regard to the points of dispute in relation to the fishing, there is no dispute as to the places where bait is caught. They are caught off the rocky portions of the sea by the northern and southern promontories of the bay. The Society fishermen do not go anywhere near these places. The migrant fishermen do not catch any fish in the portion where the Society uses its Karavalai net. The migrants catch their fish in the open sea miles away. The complaint of the Society is (1) that when the migrants' boats go out to the grounds where bait is caught prior to the commencement of fishing by the Society the fish in the area are dispersed so that the Society is unable to catch any good quantity of fish, (2) by the migrants' boats crossing at other times too, the fish available to the Society is dispersed, (3) the boats which return after catching bait return while the Society is engaged in fishing and run then boats across the net and hauling topes and have sometimes damaged the net

With regard to running the boats across the Karavalar net and hauling ropes, the migrant fishermen deny this I do not think that it is at all likely. Mohamadu Makeem, the Secretary of the Society stated that last year by such running across, their net broke. There is no evidence that any complaint was made to anyone in authority with regard to damaging the net Several petitions have been sent from time to time to those in authority by the Society or its sympathisers but in none of these is a charge of mischief by damaging the net mentioned. The evidence of Mohamadu Cassim, the Village Headman of Pottuvil, a witness for the Society is that the migrant fishermen do not usually go across that portion of the sea used by the Society. In the event of a storm, they may do so If, however, it is a fact that after the members of the Society have commenced their fishing operations, the migrant fishermen run their boats across, then the members of the Society have a right of action against such trespassers. In the case of Arumugam vs. Tampaiya (1893) 2 CLR 205 it was held that where a fisherman has actually begun fishing operations and is prevented by force or by violence or is disturbed therein by another, then an action accrues to him to recover damages But I do believe that at times when the members of the Society are not engaged with their net, the boats of the migrant fishermen traverse the portion of the sea used by the Society; particularly when they go out to catch bait on the northern promontory of the bay. It will be shorter that way then to go East and then North As stated earlier the migrants' boats go out early in the morning before the Society commences fishing

Before I deal with the question of the dispersal of fish by the disturbance caused by the boats going over the water on which the society catches fish, I think it will be appropriate to discuss the law with regard to fishing rights In the case of Louis vs Veyado, Rain (1872-1875 and 1876) 111, it was held that the right to fish on the coasts of Ceylon is common to everybody In the case of Fernando vs Fernando (1920) 22 NLR 260, it was held that all the King's subjects have a right to fish in the waters of the sea and in all tidal estuaries connected therewith A fluctuating and un-certain body of people such as the inhabitants of a district cannot by prescription gain a right of fishing against any individual member of the community and still less against the public itself In the case of Madappull vs. Patrick 54 NLR 365, it was held that under the common law every member of the public has an equal right to fish in any portion of the open sea. Such right may be curtailed, regulated or even abrogated by Statute. They may be regulated but certainly not extinguished by custom. That being so, the law is quite clear that the migrant fishermen have every right to fish in Ulla Bay including the portion where the fisher-men of the Society fish. The larger right includes the lesser right of taking their fishing boats across the portion used by the Society fishermen The common law right has not been abrogated by Statute.

In view of the legal position, the question as to whether fish disperse when water is disturbed by boats sailing through has lost its importance. I have however obtained the opinion of Dr. J C Medcof, an expert in matters relating to habits of fishes He states "fish of any particular variety do not behave the same under all conditions. While spawning or actively feeding, they will sometimes allow people to wade about in their schools. At other times they are highly sensitive and a school playing about a warf will sometimes be frightened merely by a shadow passing over them When frightened the school usually moves only a few feet and does not break up. Each species of fish seems to have some peculiar reaction patterns but these vary with age and circumstance Thus it is impossible to render an opinion that cannot be challenged on such matters and it would be false and dishonest to make any didactic statements. However, our opinion is that at depths of 2-4½ fathoms (12'-25'), boats especially non-motorized boats are likely to have no significant effect on the behaviour of fish especially at night when they cannot see." The substance of his opinion would appear to be that a shoal of fish may move a few feet away when disturbed but will not disperse

With regard to the use of the shore to beach their boats, they are beached some distance away from the spot where the Society beaches its single boat and no inconvenience is caused to the Society. The law with regard to the use of the shore is that "the use of the sea-shore is as common to all as that of the sea." Attorney-General vs. Pitche (1892) 1 S C.R. 11.

In the circumstances I am unable to hold that the migrant fishermen have in any way exceeded their common law rights or have acted in any wrongful manner The complaint of the Kathiriya Society should be rejected.

Quite outside the fishing dispute, it was alleged that the migrant fishermen molest the women of Passarakudah when they pass the wadiyas of the migrant fishermen when going to and returning from Pottuvil; that when the men are away from the village of passarakudah, the migrant fishermen go to that village and frighten the women These allegations are denied by the migrant fishermen I think this is a gross exaggeration No complaint had been made to any Headman or Court of any specific instance of any such molestation.

I appreciate that feelings between the local fishermen and the migrants are not cordial It would appear that on Independence Day, 1948, the lion flag was housted in some part of the village of Pottuvil by local Sinhalese inhabitants. The Muslim inhabitants objected and there was a root The migrant fishermen played no part in this riot It unfortunately happened that they were in these coasts during that time. Hence there is a vicarious ill-feeling against them. There is also a certain amount of jealousy because the migrant fishermen catch large quantities of fish in the high seas off this coast and make good profits. I therefore thought it desirable for the purpose of ensuring future peace between the two sections that the migrant fishermen be asked, as suggested by the Society, to beach their boats on the beach at Kudakalli some distance south of the southern promontory of Ulla Bay The migrants ·have raised two objections to this proposal One is it is inaccessible by road There is no way for traders to get to that beach by lorry or van. A new road of about 1 or 11 miles will have to be constructed Also other amenities like a good well will have to be provided I inquired from the migrants as to whether they would be willing to beach their boats there and take up their abode in wadiyas constructed by that beach in the event of such road and other amenities being provided They still objected on the second ground that there are rocks beneath the surface of the water by this beach rendering the approach to the beach dangerous I could not have the sea in that area surveyed to test the accuracy of this statement But the fact that Punchi Singho, some years ago, dragged a madel net in that area and abandoned it as unsatisfactory on the ground that there are rocks is an indication that there is substance in the objection I also suggested to the migrants that they might beach their boats in Arugam Bay opposite the Resthouse That would be a considerable distance away from the fishing grounds of the Society to the North but between the two promontories referred to earlier The migrants pointed out that at that spot the drop from the shore to the sea is very steep and that therefore it would be dangerous Komari is several miles away from this area and the fishing season there appears to be different Hence my attempts to bring about a peaceful settlement has failed
