Farmers sell produce by the roadside with closure of Dambulla Economic Centre

KANCHANA ARIYADASA, Sigiriya Special Corr

With the Dambulla Economic Centre being isolated from April 26, farmers and some business groups began selling vegetables at several locations in the Galewela Police Division on the Dambulla -

Kurunegala main road on April 27. The farmers said that they could not keep a large number of vegetables in the field within a day or two and that they would have to sell them immediately so as a solution they harvest their produce and sell it on both sides of the main road.

The police had deployed police officers at all locations in the Dambulla police area without giving any opportunity to sell vegetables on the main road. Due to the inability to sell vegetables in the Dambulla Police Division, some vendors at the Dambulla Economic Centre have contacted their farmers and visitors by phone and are selling their vegetables in this manner at several places in the Galewela Police Division on the Dambulla-Kurunegala main road. When we went to those vegetable stalls we could see some vendors smoking cigarettes violating health regulations and removing their masks and staying in the pile of vegetables.

The farmers told us that they could not wait for several days without selling their vegetables.

The Army, Police, Hospitals and other large establishments for the purchase of vegetables should be supplied with vegetables.

'Estate workers praise PM for Sendil Thondaman said that the efforts of President Gotabaya Rajapaksa and Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa to build the lives of estate workers by increasing the daily wage to Rs.1,000 are being honoured by the estate workers.

Former Minister Sendil Thondaman was participating in a special media briefing at Temple Trees yesterday.

The Opposition alleges that the daily wage of estate workers has not been increased to Rs.1, 000, but The National Plantation Corporation is now offering a daily allowance of Rs.1, 000 and several other companies have agreed to provide the allowance, he said.

He said that the Government has taken steps to increase the daily allowance of plantation workers from Rs.750 to Rs.1,000 and at the request of former Minister Arumugam Thondaman, President Gotabaya Rajapaksa and Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa announced in a pre-election proposal that steps will be taken to increase the daily wage of estate workers to Rs.1,000.

The State Plantation Corporation has taken steps to pay all the additional allowances in addition to the daily allowance. At the request of Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa, the plantation companies have agreed to pay the allowance and some companies were demanding to pluck more leaves for the Rs.1,000 allowance, but that was not fair, he said.

State Plantation Corporation Chairman Attornev-at-Law Srimal Wijesekera said that Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa had discussed increasing the daily wages of estate workers on several occasions and finally taken steps to increase the daily allowance for estate workers to Rs. 1,000. He said that there are 16 estates in the Kandy and Matale Districts under the State Plantation Corporation and according to the decision made by the Government, it has been decided to provide a daily allowance of Rs.1,000 to about 3,800 estate workers from last March.

He said that the loss of the State Plantation Corporation was Rs.329 million by 2019 and it has been reduced to Rs.149 million by 2020. It was possible to get one million kilograms of extra leaves in 2020 as compared to the 2019 leaf harvest, he said.

Onus on public co-operation

dire warning has gone out to the authorities from the Government Medical Officers Association (GMOA) for immediate steps to ensure that sufficient Oxygen stocks are in place to meet any contingency and also for increasing bed capacity in the hospitals if we are avert a situation similar to India which has been brought to its knees by the Coronavirus pandemic with around 300,000 cases and 2,000 deaths reported almost every day.

Chief Epidemiologist Dr.Sudath Samaraweera has said numerous COVID- 19 clusters were emerging in the country and this was the reason for a rapid increase in the infections although allying fears that it has not reached a stage where the virus spread will cut across the country assuming a runaway nature. In other words, we are still at the cluster or third stage and the country has not reached Stage 4 or community transmission stage. The Government yesterday assured that plenty of oxygen was available, as the two main medical grade oxygen suppliers have assured ample availability of oxygen. However, it has cautioned about the limited availability of ICU beds in the country, as our health planners have not readied facilities for a pandemic of this scale.

The authorities appear to have seized upon the gravity of the situation and taken prompt measures to contain the spread of the contagion. Several Grama Niladhari division in the Galle, Kurunegala, Moneragala and Kalutara districts have been put under lockdown while all schools in country, not only those in Western and North Western Provinces, have been temporarily closed. The Police have also stepped up operations to haul up those violating health guidelines such as being without masks and failing to observe the distance rule.

All public and private functions too have been put on hold and only previously arranged wedding receptions have been permitted with a restricted number of invitees. Private workplaces have again been urged to let their staffers work from home, with only a limited number of employees being physically present in the office. The annual Royal-Thomian Big match too has been postponed even though the encounter was to take place behind closed doors at the Sooriyawewa stadium. The public sector too has reverted to employing only a limited number of staff in the workplaces which is a prudent move. This is because political appointments under all Governments have made State institutions bursting at the seams - a sure recipe for disaster under the prevailing circumstanc-

It is certainly unfortunate that the country which was on the mend only six months ago vis-a-vis the Coronavirus pandemic has come to this sorry pass due to the irresponsible conduct of the people during the recent festive season. They went shopping en masse, forgetting all health guidelines and also went in droves to the outstations, which were relatively free of the virus. Had the authorities paid heed to the warnings of the PHIs- who work at the grassroots and know what they are talking about - we would not have had to endure this painful situation.

First it was the Christmas festival where the PHI wanted the authorities to continue with the lockdowns that went unheeded and now the PHIs are witnessing a repeat when their admonitions that movement restrictions be enforced during the New Year period fell on deaf ears. Only this time the consequences are much graver than post Christmas as can be seen with the majority of the population who went to town (or villages) enjoying the festivities to their heart's content with nary a care from for health restrictions nor distance rules. This was a recipe for disaster, of course. We could at least have leaned from our next door neighbour on this score.

In any case, full lockdowns can be economically devastating, as we learned last year, though the authorities will probably have no option if the situation goes from bad to worse. However, public cooperation is vital to avert such a drastic step. Right now, it is essential to follow all the health guidelines such as keeping the distance from the next person, washing hands frequently with soap and water or sanitizer, wearing face masks correctly, avoiding crowds, minimizing travel and staying at home if showing signs of any illness.

The authorities should assist the Sri Jayewardenepura University to ramp up its capabilities to identify variants of the virus, which can lead to better strategies for controlling the COVID outbreak. Such research facilities should also be given to a few other universities and research institutions to expedite the process of identifying the variants. It is said that the present surge gas been caused by a new variant that can stay airborne for some time and cause infections. It is apparently more transmissible too. But more research is needed to ascertain the exact picture in this regard.

The authorities alone cannot fight this global contagion. Public cooperation is essential. If each one of us does our duty at this crucial hour, it will not be impossible to defeat the virus. This has been the case in all countries that have dealt successfully with COVID.

MPs' un-parliamentary conduct stirs backlash

he honourable Members representing the country's supreme law making body made a spectacle of themselves for the umpteenth time last Wednesday leading to a free-for-all in the "August Assembly"

Brawls in the well of the House and the use of un-parliamentary language to insult political opponents are no longer unusual scenes in our Parliament in contemporary times. Yet, resorting to unruly behaviour merely because the Government and the Opposition could not be of the same mind over a trivial matter as to who would be moving the next day's Adjournment Motion was a new low.

The two-day Adjournment Motion was on the report of the Presidential Commission of Inquiry (PCoI) that probed into allegations of political victimizations from 2015 to 2019. The report of the three-Member Commission headed by retired Supreme Court Judge Upali Abeyratne, which was tabled in Parliament on March 9, has whipped up controversy over its recommendations creating ripples in political circles.

Who moves this debate was more or less a technicality related to Parliament procedure and at the end both sides of the House got their time to speak in the debate without discrimination. What the Members of Parliament (MPs) should have been worried more was the stance they ought to take during the course of the debate.

Degrading conduct

A pertinent question here is how the citizenry can expect our MPs to work in synergy when it comes to more serious national legislation, for example, a new Constitution, if they are unable to settle even minor disputes through negotiations.

The Government and the Opposition Members may certainly have many points on which they cannot see eye to eye as they represent rival political parties, but flexing their muscles each time such an issue pops up does not bode well for a healthy Parliamentary democracy.

The MPs, who decorated this ornate august Assembly a long time ago, did thrust and parry with wellarticulated arguments to prove their points, and time was when, the people were excited to see their performances in Parliament. On the contrary, it would not be an exaggeration to say that the people tend to despise the increasing instances of un-parliamentary behaviour of the contemporary set of politicians in general and often pour scorn on Parliament as an "extravagant talk shop". Despite belonging to opposing camps, the MPs, once elected to Parliament, have a bigger responsibility to give their best for the law and policy making needed for the country. Last Friday, Speaker Mahinda Yapa Abeywardena told the House that around Rs. 100,000 is spent for each minute of a Parliamentary sitting. The Speaker reminded the MPs to speak to the point without distracting the sittings and wasting public money.

Code of Conduct

The Speaker has already appointed an eight-Member Committee headed by Deputy Speaker Ranjith Siyambalapitiya and comprising senior Members representing both the Government and the Opposition to look into last Wednesday's fracas in the House.

In addition to the melee inside the Chamber, there were reports that Samagi Jana Balawegaya (SJB) MP

Speaker Mahinda Yapa Abeywardena presiding over the House

A scene of the brawl in Parliament last Wednesday

Harin Fernando and Sri Lanka Podujana Peramuna (SLPP) MP Janaka Tissa Kuttiarachchi locked horns near the entrance to the Main Chamber. Later, MP Tissa Kuttiarachchi lodged a complaint at the Welikada Police stating that MP Fernando hurled abuse at him and assaulted him at the Parliamentary Complex.

The Code of Conduct for Parliamentarians, which was introduced about three years ago, is limited to paper and the actual conduct of the MPs has been a far cry from that. The revised set of Standing Orders of Parliament adopted in 2018 together with the Code of Conduct for MPs have included more provisions to take disciplinary action against the misbehaviour of MPs.

The next day, Minister Dr. Bandula Gunawardena, who joined with several other MPs from both sides in the House to express concerns over the previous day's incidents in Parliament, pointed out that it was high time to dust down those papers and impose punishments against the MPs, who were found to have misbehaved, after an inquiry. Observing that dignity and decorum of the House have been seriously eroded in recent times, he urged the Speaker to take tangible actions to stop the rot.

tion has completely changed, hadly damaging the reputation of this institution locally as well as internationally. This has to be corrected before it is too late," he com-

Social media

Minister Namal Rajapaksa, observing that there is a growing tendency to live stream disturbances in Parliament via Facebook, came up with a request to the Speaker to consider prohibiting MPs from going live on Facebook while in the Chamber. Then again, many independent analysts opine that trying to keep the ugly scenes in Parliament out of the public eye would not be a desirable solution for the problem at hand.

On the other hand, it could be seen that the MPs, may they be in the Government or the Opposition, are also in the habit of resorting to theatrics to play to the gallery and be in the media spotlight. This is one main reason why they promote their own demonstrations and other chaotic scenes in Parliament through phone cameras. In that sense, MP Rajapaksa has a point when he suggested restricting MPs' use of social media as a political propaganda tool in the Main Chamber.

Parliament had witnessed worse scenes not so long ago where exchange of fisticuffs by the MPs had ended up in bloodshed and the MPs were either rushed to hospital or the Parliament Medical Centre as a result. There had also been many instances in recent memory where MPs invaded the well of the House hurling abuses at the Speaker and disrupting the Parliament business.

One cannot forget the infamous events that took place during the period of political crisis in late 2018 when speaking of chaotic scenes in the country's Legislature. No action was taken against any MP, who made a mockery of Parliament's dignity and decorum, despite a Parliamentary inquiry and a police investigation in that regard.

Opposition

In the meantime, SJB MPs Harin Fernando and Rishad Bathiudeen were in hot water last week as investigative bodies were after them as the investigations pertaining to the Easter Sunday terrorist attacks were being accelerated.

MP Fernando was summoned by the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) to record a statement to extract any useful information he possesses with regard to the incident, but he was a no-show. This was despite his explosive speech in Parliament on April 20 in the debate on the Easter Sunday terrorist attacks.

He had suddenly been admitted to a private hospital in Colombo, while the Opposition lawmakers including Opposition Leader Sajith Premadasa, who visited him at the hospital, complained to the media outside the hospital that MP Fernando faces imminent arrest over his revelations in Parliament. The Government denied this claim stating that no MP would be arrested for a speech made in Parliament which is covered by Parliamentary Privilege.

Meanwhile, a rude shock awaited All Ceylon Makkal Congress (ACMC) Leader and MP Bathiudeen in the wee hours on Saturday as the CID in a joint operation with the Terrorism Investigation Division (TID) arrested him at his Colombo residence.

In a voice cut later that day, Police Spokesperson DIG Ajith Rohana explained that MP Bathiudeen and his brother Riyaj were arrested and detained under the provisions of the Prevention of Terrorism Act for allegedly aiding and abetting the Easter Sunday terrorist attackers. He underlined that the arrests were made after an exhaustive analysis of all evidence and findings hitherto uncovered.

Interestingly, Opposition Leader Premadasa was enjoying close encounters with wildlife in the Yala National Park on Sunday in the midst of back-to-back political blows for the Opposition. Chilling out at Yala, Opposition Leader Premadasa, a known wildlife enthusiast, shared a video clip in his social media accounts admiring a rare sight of a leopard in the Park.

The Maldiv

"GET REAL", THE PRIVATE SECTOR SHOULD BE TOLD ABOUT TOURISM

RAJPAL ABEYNAYAKE

e can call ourselves the country that does not need a slogan or a branding. We can count ourselves as the fortunate island that nature endowed so as to need no embellishment whatsoever — the good wine that needs no bush.

But yet our tourism trade has had patchy success at least compared to the roaring success of the Maldives for instance, which just has one attraction, awesome beaches with shallow water for miles with a colour and sheen that defies description.

We have had branding conundrums instead of unbridled success of that sort. We are the Miracle of Asia, then we are the Land Like No Other.

In ancient times we were Serendib, the island of serendipity. Yes, we were the happy accident, the great chance, and we gave that word to the English dictionary. But in modern times we have not been able to replicate that quality of unplanned excellence. On the contrary, our tourism has been overdone - over mapped-out, plagued by overthinking and turbo-charged with promotion that has gone overboard. It has been all over the place — and of course the inevitable contrast has been the Maldives which has just one asset but has been able to mine that mother-lode to a point where it seems they have a found a perpetual source of wealth.

Mixed bag

Ours has been a mixed bag at best. We were busy trying to convert serendipity into a formula. But also, we have been busy solving problems — of terrorism, and the fallout from the sudden event such as the Easter attacks.

But despite our fractured politics, and at one time our endless violence, there was always the sense that these were not the real impediments that plagued our tourism sector. We have remained a niche of sorts. We were in a way shortchanged by a global travel culture that celebrates hedonistic

We have been unable to do hedonistic excess, even in patches. The Maldives in some ways is a study in hedonistic excess. It is packaged as blue waters and romantic islands but in reality it is resorts that encourage a splurge, with idyllic water sports and a culture of pampering and flattery of guests weaved into the bargain.

When MP Diana Gamage says something about keeping bars open till the wee hours, she has a vague idea about this hedonistic excess but bungles the language. She is far too direct about it in any case. Besides, it is not just a matter of keeping bars open — if that is what she said in the first place.

Since we are unable to do hedonistic excess in the way Bangkok and Thailand does, we have suffered. But yet we have not even been a good Malaysia. But in many ways Malaysia too has been hedonistic excess. Kuala Lumpur has had the Petronas Towers and the surrounding orgy of designer branding excess. That is also hedonistic and of course Malaysia has had the petroleum dollars to build the hype to such a zenith.

If we cannot offer hedonistic excess all around the country we should be able to offer it in pockets in controlled territories, but we have not been able to do that because our plans have usually been overkill and have targeted tourists on the theory that the more we market the more they are bound to arrive in their thousands.

Again, the Maldives is the best example of how they protect their culture with their tourism. Their hedonism is offered in strictly controlled environments and interaction between the locals and resort holidaymakers and other lounge lizards is almost non-existent.

Tourism enclaves

This country has not seen the need to hermetically seal the tourists in their own zones partly because we do not have dire cultural strictures here as they do in the Maldives that bans the consumption of liquor in their communities, and imposes Sharia law.

But if we cannot offer the kind of hedonistic excess that Diana Gamage seems to suggest however clumsily, we should be able create the kind of tourism enclaves that they have done in the Maldives.

But our specialty has been general sightseeing, and since there is so much of that to do in this country that sort of tourism happens anyway — but travellers, truth be told, by and large want nothing but hedonism.

Such hedonistic experiences cannot be created by marketing. It has to be done unfortunately by offering a dissipated experience of bar-hopping, gambling and other unmentionables. From Bali to Bangkok to Macau to the Maldives, they have done that, and if we do not follow suit in some way we could essentially forget about attracting tourists the way these countries have. For the other type of backpacking low-budget tourism and of course the beach relaxation type of experience we offer as staple in the coastal belt, we do not even have to create a market as such — because that segment is already there except of course during this pandemic when any type of travel is generally at a standstill worldwide.

Some countries do nothing about their tourism enterprise and of course they get nothing back. But we did not do a lot about our tourism, or wait, that is not true, we have over the years been doing a whole lot of damage to it — and yet we got something back. This is true paradise. We do not do hedonism but Sri Lanka lovers are merely high on life and they keep coming back.

Rich countries get tourists anyway. The United States gets the most. UK gets a whole lot. Spain, well, not that rich but it is a special place and there are always the special exceptions such as that. But Thailand is a tourism Mecca, and that is pure hedonism.

So if people genuinely want to improve the tourism industry they should not be too annoyed with Diana Gamage. She had the absolute correct idea in her head except that she put it in unconscionably crude terms. Of course, the Maldives is far more jealous about preserving their cultural purity than we are as a Buddhist country. But that does not mean they did not create the hedonism — they just strictly kept that part away from their normal civilian lives. Smart.

Maldives type

If enclaves are created, they have to be essentially the Maldives or the Macau type. "Tourists only", and hedonistic lifestyles in those enclaves unless of course we want hedonism everywhere as in Thailand — and that we can never do. Of course if we are going to have the usual cultural police trying to pry into everything that happens in tourism enclaves, that wouldn't do. At the moment, the Government is trying to bring the three main tourism related State bodies together to form one institution. Good thinking, in the interests of having a cohesive tourism development drive once Covid is over. There are protests with regard to the move from the private sector.

The private sector cannot do wonders. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, if the cliché may be forgiven. Private sector tourism promoters were unable to shore up the numbers to anywhere near Thailand, the Maldives or Malaysia levels after scores of years. They cannot demand a stake in State-centered decision-making if they have failed. They cannot be faulted for failing either. We do not have hedonistic enclaves, we are not a rich country either. They cannot do it all by themselves.

It is why State policy is necessary to show a good direction. Their argument that there was a well thought out tourism plan in 2005 is hilarious. No matter how well it was thought out, or supposedly thought out, it has not delivered. Are these people out of their minds? Tourism is lagging behind the Maldives levels by leagues and they are insisting on sticking to tired old unsuccessful legislation with regard to tourism. Whatever they are insisting on developing in the country, it surely cannot be the tourist trade

WORLD MILITARY SPENDING RISES TO US$ 2 TRILLION

he United Nations – which is desperately seeking funds to help developing nations battling a staggering array of socio-economic problems, including extreme poverty, hunger, economic inequalities and environmental hazards – has continued to be one of the strongest advocates of disarmament.

The world body has relentlessly campaigned for reduced military spending in an attempt to help divert some of these resources into sustainable development and humanitarian assistance.

But according to a new report released April 26 by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI), world military expenditure rose to nearly $2 trillion in 2020, an increase of 2.6 percent, in real terms, from 2019.

The COVID-19 pandemic, which brought the world to a virtual standstill for the last 14 months, apparently has had no impact on military spending.

Ironically, four of the five biggest spenders were permanent members of the UN Security Council (UNSC), namely the US, China, Russia and UK. The fifth biggest spender was India, currently a non-permanent member of the UNSC.

Military spending by China, which is currently in a new Cold War with the US, grew for the 26th consecutive year.

The latest figures of rising arms expenditures by some of the big powers makes a mockery of the UN's longstanding pleas for cutbacks and diversion of funds from the military into sustainable development.

William D. Hartung, Director, Arms and Security Program at the Washington-based Center for International Policy told IPS: "At a time when a global pandemic, climate change, and racial and economic injustice pose the greatest risks to human lives and livelihoods, the increase in global military expenditures in 2020 marks a dismal failure by policymakers across the world to address the most urgent challenges we face".

He arrand that even a fraction of

He argued that even a fraction of the nearly $2 trillion spent on the military last year could have gone a long way towards sustainable investments in public health, environmental protection, and combating inequality. "World leaders can and must do better," said Hartung.

The UN Office for Disarmament Affairs (UNODA) points out that over the past century, governments have sought ways to reach a global agreement on reductions in military expenditures. Various proposals were discussed in the League of Nations, and later in the UN. Early proposals in the UN focused on reducing the expenditures of States with large militaries, and on freeing up funds for development aid.

But proposals for cutting military spending did not materialize," says UNODA. However, they led to the development of the UN Standardized Instrument for Reporting Military Expenditures in 1981— later renamed United Nations Report on Military Expenditures (MilEx) — under which countries are encouraged to report on their military expenditures.

Dr. Natalie J. Goldring, a Senior Fellow and Adjunct Full Professor with the Security Studies Program in the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University, told IPS "the latest military spending data from SIPRI are difficult to reconcile with the reality of the world we live in today"

ty of the world we live in today". In a year in which the global community was dealing with the horrors of the Covid-19 pandemic, SIPRI's data show that military spending continued unabated. Military spending increased in nine of the 10 countries with the highest military expenditures, she pointed out.

Even though the global economy as measured by global gross domestic product (GDP) decreased by 4.4 percent, she said, global military spending increased 2.6 percent over the year. Global military spending is going in exactly the wrong direction.

"Unfortunately, the United States continues to lead the world in military spending, accounting for 39 percent of the global total," said Dr Goldring, who is Visiting Professor of the Practice in Duke University's Washington DC program and also represents the Acronym Institute at the United Nations on conventional weapons and arms trade issues.

According to SIPRI's data, that's more than the rest of the top 10 military spenders combined. And it's more than twice the total of the countries which are most commonly perceived by US policymakers as its main military competitors, Russia and China, she added.

Dr. Alon Ben-Meir, professor of international relations at the Center for Global Affairs at New York University, told IPS it is indeed ironic that four of the five permanent members of the UNSC are the largest military spenders.

"I do not expect any serious discussion about world disarmament unless many of the consuming conflicts are resolved, and in particular the growing, rather than diminishing, tension between the United States, Russia, and China," Dr Ben-Meir declared.

'The recent increases in US military spending can be primarily attributed to heavy investment in research and development, and several long-term projects such as modernizing the US nuclear arsenal and large-scale arms procurement,' said Alexandra Marksteiner, a researcher with SIPRI's Arms and Military Expenditure Programme.

Meanwhile, China's military expenditure, the second highest in the world, is estimated to have totalled US$ 252 billion in 2020. This represents an increase of 1.9 percent over 2019 and 76 percent over the decade 2011–20. China's spending has risen for 26 consecutive years, the longest series of uninterrupted increases by any country in the SIPRI Military Expenditure Database.

In an open letter to Secretary-General Antonio Guterres last September, the Berlin-based International Peace Bureau called for world disarmament and the reduction of global military spending.

"We write to you on behalf of the International Peace Bureau and more than 11,000 signatories to express our support for your call for a global ceasefire. We would also like to emphasize the need for (nuclear) disarmament and the reallocation of money from the military to healthcare, social, and environmental needs — to the fulfillment of the Social Development Goals."

Last month, the United Nations was hoping to raise some US$ 3.85 billion from more than 100 governments and donors at a virtual pledging conference. The funds were meant to avert widespread famine in the world's worst humanitarian crisis in Yemen,

But the total pledges amounted to only $1.7 billion – less than half – in what the UN secretary general described as a "disappointing outcome". "Millions of Yemeni children, women and men desperately need aid to live. Cutting aid is a death sentence," António Guterres said in a statement.

In its latest study, SIPRI said even though military spending rose globally, some countries explicitly reallocated part of their planned military spending to pandemic response, such as Chile and South Korea. Several others, including Brazil and Russia, spent considerably less than their initial military budgets for 2020.

Dr. Goldring pointed out that in 2020, approximately 1.8 million people around the world died of Covid. SIPRI's military spending figures suggest that the countries with the highest military expenditures decided that business as usual was the correct direction to follow, despite the Covid pandemic.

"This is a time for reevaluating priorities. Countries should be giving priority to the health and welfare of their people, rather than continuing to fund the military-industrial complex. Cutting military spending would free funds for human needs and sustainable development."

"The UN has suggested diverting funds from military expenditures to fund sustainable development. But in reality, this isn't a question of diverting funds – it's devoting them to what they should have been allocated to in the first place."

"In the early days of his Administration, President Biden has not shown an inclination to reverse the United States' excessive military spending patterns. He is proceeding with expensive new nuclear weapons and continuing to propose bloated military budgets.

There's still time to reevaluate this approach, restructure US military spending, and focus on human needs. Cutting the military budget would also free US financial resources to help deal with the urgent global problems of the Covid pandemic and the climate crisis."

More than a decade ago, then UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said, "The world is over armed, and peace is underfunded." Unfortunately, this statement continues to be true. (IPS)

INDIA'S COVID CRISIS:

Sardar Patel Covid Care Cor

AVISUAL GUIDE

devastating second wave of the Coronavirus in India has seen hospitals and crematoriums overwhelmed and widespread shortages of oxygen and medicines.

Here's a visual guide to what is happening and what the authorities are doing about it. Case numbers and deaths in India are continuing to rise fast, fuelled by a new variant.

The country hit a record number of cases on Monday (26) - the fifth time in a row - as well as its highest daily number of deaths.

But the true numbers of cases and deaths are likely to be higher than the numbers provided by authorities, with many people avoiding testing or struggling to access it. Many deaths in rural areas also go unregistered.

Doctors in India's capital Delhi have described how people are dying on the streets outside hospitals as the country struggles to cope.

In total, India has confirmed nearly 17 million infections and 192,000 deaths. Virologists say they expect the rate of infections to continue to increase for another two to three weeks. There are very few critical care beds.

The country has a chronic shortage of space on its intensive care wards, with many patients' families forced to drive for miles to try to find a bed for their loved one.

In Delhi – a region of about 20 million people - hospitals are full and are turning away new patients.

Some streets outside medical facilities have become crowded with the seriously ill, their loved ones trying to arrange stretchers and oxygen supplies for them as they plead with hospital authorities for a place inside.

"We have been roaming around for three days searching for a bed," one man told Reuters news agency as his wife sat immobile on the pavement.

On Monday (26), the government announced military medical infrastructure would be made available to civilians and retired medical military personnel would be helping out in Covid health facilities.

Shortage of oxygen

Hospitals across India are also experiencing oxygen shortages and in desperate need of supplies, with some forced to put up signs warning of a lack of supplies.

The country now has the greatest demand for oxygen out of all other low, lower-middle and upper-middle-income countries, according to the PATH Oxygen Needs Tracker.

Demand has been growing between six percent - eight percent each day, according to PATH, an organisation that works with global institutions and businesses to tackle health problems. Dr Harjit Singh Bhatti, who works on a Covid ward of Delhi's Manipal Hospital, described watching people gasping for air in the street like "fish out of water".

"They are not getting oxygen and they are dying on the roads," he said.

Typically, healthcare facilities consume about 15 percent of oxygen supply in India, leaving the rest for industrial use.

But amid India's second wave, nearly 90 percent of the country's oxygen supply -7,500 metric tonnes daily – is being diverted for medical use, according to Rajesh Bhushan, a senior health official.

To try to get supplies to where they are needed, the government has now started an 'oxygen express', with trains carrying tankers to wherever there is demand. The Indian Air Force is also airlifting oxygen from military bases. The facilities, which were not needed last year when strict lockdown measures saw cases decline, were able to provide an additional 64,000 temporary beds, Gopal Agarwal, a spokesman for Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party, told the BBC.

The trains, which can be driven to stations in cities and towns where required, have beds for patients, bathrooms, power points for medical equipment and oxygen supplies.

Indian Railways already has experience of running hospitals on trains. The Lifeline Express, launched in 1991, travels round the country providing diagnostic, medical and surgical treatment to patients.

Sports halls and stadiums become hospitals

Sports halls, stadiums and ashrams have also been converted into makeshift treatment centres to ease the pressure on hospitals.

Venues like Bangalore's Koramangala Indoor Stadium, the Indira Gandhi Athletic Stadium, in Guwahati, and Delhi's Radha Soami Satsang Beas campus have been converted into quarantine centres.

Some of the beds being used are made from cardboard.

During a surge in cases last year, the Delhi campus belonging to the Radha Soami Satsang Beas organisation was transformed into the 10,000-bed Sardar Patel Covid Care Centre, with 1,000 'oxygen-supported' beds. It treated more than 11,000 people before it closed in February.

This time the centre – which is the size of 20 football fields – is expected to start with about 2,500 beds, increasing to 5,000.

Aryan Paper, which makes the cardboard bed bases being used, says the emergency beds are made from high-strength corrugated board.

They are particularly useful in the current crisis because they are cheap, recyclable, can be flatpacked for easy transportation and assembled in five minutes. Many people are being forced to turn to makeshift facilities for mass burials and cremations as India's funeral services become overwhelmed. At least one facility in Delhi has resorted to building pyres in its car park in order to cope with the number of bodies. Other sites are holding mass cremations, with staff reportedly working day and night Jitender Singh Shunty, head of a non-profit medical service running a crematorium in north-east Delhi, is using a car park next door to deal with the unprecedented number

"It's difficult to watch," he said.

A number of places have also reported running low on wood for pyres.

Jayant Malhotra who has been helping out at a crematorium in Delhi, told the BBC he had never seen such a terrifying situation.

THE MESSAGES DECIDING BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH

s a second wave of coronavirus devastates India. with more than 350,000 cases reported daily, the families of the sick are desperately hunting on social media for help.

From morning to night, they scour Instagram accounts, drop messages on WhatsApp groups and work through their phone books. They're looking for hospitals beds, oxygen, the Covid drug Remdesivir and plasma.

It's chaotic and overwhelming. A WhatsApp message starts circulating: "Two ICU beds free." Minutes later, they're gone, to be occupied by whoever got there first. Another message: "Urgently needed oxygen concentrator. Please help."

As the health system buckles, it is community, self-help and luck standing between life and death.

ply and the sick don't have the luxury of time. When I started this piece on Friday, I spoke to one man looking for oxygen on WhatsApp for his 30-year-old cousin in Uttar Pradesh. By the time I finished it on Sunday, he had died.

Others are exhausted and distressed after days of shouldering the weight of finding life-saving treatment for their loved ones.

"It's 6.00 am in India and that's when we start the calls. We find out my grandpa's needs for the day oxygen or injections - and we hit WhatsApp and we call everyone we know," Avani Singh explains. Her 94-year-old grandfather is extremely ill with Covid-19 in Delhi. From their home in the US, Avani and her mother, Amrita, describe a dizzying web of family, friends, relatives and professional contacts, sometimes many times removed, who helped when he fell ill and quickly deteriorated.

"We were working every contact we know. I was looking on social media - there are pages I follow that say 'so and so confirmed has ICU beds' or 'this place has oxygen' - between us we tried around 200 places," Avani explains. Eventually through a school friend they found a hospital with beds but discovered it had no oxygen. By now, Avani's grandfather was unconscious. "Then I posted a plea on Facebook and a friend knew an emergency room with oxygen because of that friend my dad survived the night," Amrita explains.

When we speak on Saturday, his outlook has improved but the task ahead for Avani and Amrita is to get hold of Remdesivir injections. They make the calls and Amrita's brother in Delhi drives to the locations, clocking up to a 100 miles (160km) a day.

"My grandad is my best friend. I can't thank the people running the Instagram pages enough for everything they are doing," Avani says. But information quickly goes outof-date and they're worried about

"We heard one pharmacy had them, but by the time my cousin got there, there was none left. It opened at 8.30 am and people had been queuing from midnight – only the first 100 got the injections.

"Now they are selling medicine on the black market - it should be Rs. 1,200 ($16) and they're selling for Rs. 100,000 ($1,334) - and you can't guarantee it's real," Amrita explains.

And like in any system that relies on personal connections, not everyone has a fair shot. Money, family contacts and a higher social status all bring a greater chance of success, as does access to internet and mobile phones.

Amid the chaos, individuals are pitching in to try to bring some order and centralise information, setting up community groups and using Instagram accounts to circulate contacts.

Arpita Chowdhury, 20, and a group of students at her college in India's capital, Delhi, are running an online database of information they gather and verify themselves.

"It's changing every hour and minute. Five minutes ago, I was told that there is a hospital with 10 beds available, but when I call there are no beds available," she explains.

With her colleagues, she calls contact numbers advertised on social media that offer oxygen, beds, plasma or medicine and publishes the verified information online. She then fields requests from relatives of Covid patients asking for help. (BBC)

SVCC Director here on three-day Dhamma Yatra

Dr. Singh visited the neighbouring villages of Kadigamuwe and Panawawe upon the invitation of the local clergy on April 25. In addition to paying homage to Mahasangha in these two villages, he prayed at the local temples and Pirivena. On Bak Full Moon Poya day on April 26, the SVCC Director participated in Dhatu Wandana (Relics worship) at the Sacred Buddha relics at the Sri Sudarshanaramaya Temple, Kadurawewa. The Mahasangha and the people of the villages appreciated the Dhamma Yatra organised by the High Commission of India and requested for more similar, close interactions between people and clergy of Sri Lanka and India.

It may be recalled that addressing the Dharma Chakra Day celebrations in New Delhi in 2020, Prime Minister Narendra Modi had said that lasting solutions to the extra-ordinary challenges being fought by the world could come only from the ideals of The Buddha.

The Prime Minister had stressed these ideals were relevant in the past, are relevant in the present, and will remain so in the

US should see turning point in pandemic - Fauci

White House chief medical advisor Dr. Anthony Fauci said Monday that Americans should begin to see a turning point in the pandemic "within a few weeks.'

The United States has been averaging about 3 million Covid-19 vaccination shots per day, Fauci said. Meanwhile, the nation reported a seven-day average of 58,164 new Covid cases per day as of Sunday, according to a CNBC analysis of data compiled by Johns Hopkins University. That's down 14% from a week ago.

If the U.S. continues its vaccination pace, "literally within a few weeks, we're going to start to see a turning around of the dynamics," Fauci said Monday during a virtual event hosted by the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health.

"Not down to no infections," he said. "If you're waiting for classic measles-like herd immunity, that's going to be a while before we get there. But that doesn't mean we're not going to have a significant diminution in the number of infections per day and a significant diminution in all of the parameters, namely hospitalizations and deaths.'

The Biden administration has pushed Americans to get vaccinated

as quickly as possible as new, highly contagious variants spread.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said earlier this month that the B.1.1.7 variant, which appears to be more deadly and spread more easily than other strains, is now the most common Covid strain circulating in the U.S.

U.S. health officials say they are concerned the highly contagious variant, first identified in the U.K., could stall the nation's progress on the pandemic. The outbreak has killed at least 572,287 Americans in a little over a vear.

Still, vaccinations are being administered at a rapid pace. More than 139 million Americans, or 42.2% of the total U.S. population, had received at least one dose of a Covid-19 vaccine as of Sunday, according to the CDC. Roughly 94.7 million people, or 28.5% of the population, are fully vaccinated, according to the CDC.

Last week, the Biden administration announced a massive campaign to persuade more Americans, particularly young people, to take the Covid-19 vaccines as supply begins to outpace demand in some parts of the U.S. Fauci has said the goal is to vaccinate between 70% and 85% of the U.S. population — or roughly 232 million to 281 million people — to achieve herd immunity and suppress the pandemic.

But he said Monday that herd immunity is a "moving target." The U.S. should just focus on getting as many Americans vaccinated as possible, Fauci said.

"We don't know what the durability of the infection-induced immunity is. We don't know if someone who got infected last winter or in the early part of 2020 is going to be safe from a protected standpoint now," he said. (CNBC)

Six feet rule indoors does nothing to stop spread of COVID: MIT

The widely used rule of staying 6 feet away from others does little to affect the risk of exposure to COVID-19 in indoor spaces, according to a new study out of MIT.

According to MIT researchers, the rule is based on an outdated understanding of how the coronavirus moves in closed spaces.

They said other variables — like the number of people in a space, whether they wear masks, what they are doing, and the level of ventilation — were much more important.

The 6-foot rule is used in various forms around the world: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention advises 6 feet of separation indoors and outdoors, while in the UK the figure is 2 meters. In much of Europe, the figure is 1 meter, which is also recommended as a minimum distance by the World Health Organiza-

But while such distancing rules are easy to remember, and purport to suit any situation, the new study says they may not be that useful.

The study was released online ahead of its publication in the peerreviewed journal PNAS on Tuesday. It says a better way of controlling indoor exposure is to do individual calculations based on variables for that space. In some cases, the exposure level might be the same at 6 feet as at 60 feet, one of the study authors has

Martin Bazant and John Bush, both MIT professors in applies mathematics, developed a formula to estimate how long it would take for a person to hit dangerous levels of exposure from one infected person entering a room. The calculation is more sophisticated version of the traffic-light system previously proposed by MIT. It takes into account the number of people in the room, the size of the space, what they are doing, whether masks are being worn, and what kind of ventilation is in place.

Using this calculation, it could be that the level of exposure is high in some spaces even if people are more than 6 feet away. It could also be lower than expected.

"The distancing isn't helping you that much, and it's also giving you a false sense of security because you're as safe at 6 feet as you are at 60 feet if you're indoors. Everyone in that space is at roughly the same risk, actually," Bazant told CNBC.

Scientific understanding of how the coronavirus moves in the air has challenged earlier assumptions about how best to adapt to minimize its spread.

At the beginning of the pandemic, it was widely believed that the virus traveled via heavier droplets ejected during exhalation, sneezing, or speaking. But evidence has long suggested that the virus instead floats around on lighter aerosol droplets that can stay suspended in the air and travel much farther than first thought. (Business Insider) ed from pandemic lockdowns last year likely affected the timing of snowmelt in the Indus River basin of Pakistan and India, researchers reported on Monday.

The lockdowns cut emissions of soot and other pollutants, as people drove less and the generation of electricity, largely from coal, was reduced. That meant less soot was deposited on snow, where it absorbs sunlight, emits heat and causes faster melting.

The cleaner snow in 2020 reflected more sunlight and did not melt as fast, the researchers said. In all, that delayed runoff into the Indus River of more than one and a half cubic miles of melt water, they calculated, similar to the volume of some of the largest reservoirs in the United States.

More than 300 million people depend on the Indus for water, much of which starts as snow in the high peaks of the Karakoram and other mountain ranges.

Timing of melt water runoff in the spring and summer can be crucial for managing water supplies over time. In many parts of the world, climate change has affected this timing, with warmer temperatures and a shift to more rain and less snow causing more snow to melt sooner. Slower runoff can thus be beneficial, helping managers of reservoirs store more water and maintain a steady flow over the year.

Ned Bair, a snow hydrologist at the University of California, Santa Barbara, and the lead researcher, said that while they could not prove conclusively that the pandemic was the reason for the timing delay, "it seems unlikely that anything else would have led to India imposed a nationwide lockdown in late March last year that continued through early May. Several studies showed rapid improvements in air quality in that period, particularly in and around Delhi, which is notorious for having some of the most unhealthy air in the world.

Anecdotal reports also suggested that the air over much of the subcontinent was cleaner. In Kathmandu, Nepal, for example, residents reported being able to see Mount Everest, 100 miles distant, for the first time in decades. By analyzing satellite remotesensing images, the researchers found that concentrations of soot and other particles on snow and ice in the Indus basin decreased by 30 percent in 2020 compared with the 20-year average. ### India's COVID surge imperils global economic recovery:

US Chamber

The United States Chamber of Commerce has warned that the Indian economy - the world's sixth-largest - could falter as a result of a record spike in coronavirus cases, creating a drag for the global economy. Myron Brilliant, an executive vice president of the Chamber, the biggest US business lobby, said on Monday that the risk of spillover effects was high given that many US companies employ millions of Indian workers to run their back-office operations.

"We expect that this could get worse before it gets better," Brilliant told the Reuters news agency, citing a "real risk" the Indian economy would falter.

'There's a big concern about the drag on the [US] economy by a devastating, spreading virus in India. The surge in cases appears to already be affecting the Indian economy. The Bloomberg news agency reported on Monday that high-frequency data are pointing to a deepening contraction in India's retail activity in the week through April 18 relative to its pre-pandemic January 2020

That is a key risk for an economy where consumption makes up about 60 percent of gross domestic product.

For now, Brilliant said the focus was on helping the Indian people.

The Chamber and CEOs from 40 firms on Monday launched a public-private task force to provide India with urgently needed medical supplies, oxygen and other assistance and unveiled a new portal in which US firms can offer in-kind donations.

The partnership also includes the US-India Business Council, the Business Roundtable and the US-India Strategic Partnership Forum, the Chamber said.

Chamber officials and the CEOs met with Secretary of State Antony Blinken and White House adviser Kurt Campbell on Monday to discuss the depth and breadth of the economic and humanitarian crisis facing India.

Tuan Bohoran was a fine scrum half

ALTHAF NAWAZ

The Malay community in Sri Lanka has played a pivotal role in the field of sports. The game of rugby has a special place and they contributed immensely towards its success. Some of them hailed from generations who handled the oval shaped ball. Tuan Krishan Bohoran was another fine player who came from a rugby playing background including his uncles, cousin and father bringing honour and fame for the country.

Bohoran was born in 1976 and his father is Tuan Rahim who influenced his career playing for Sri Lanka Police as a Flanker during the period of Anton Benedict, Daya Jayasundera and Numal Lewke. He later played rugby in Qatar for the Lanka Lions Team. Mother is Nona Hafeela Samath. He has two siblings Tuan Rafeel is his brother and Razeena is the sister. Due to his family members being educated at Isipathana, he too obtained a place there and enrolled in 1982 and completed his studies in 1993. With his immediate brother being a rugby player who played for college in 1991, Bohoran was highly motivated by him to play rugby. He started to play rugby at Junior level at the tender age of nine years and started to play competitive rugby in the under-13 age group when he was 11 years old in 1989. His team became the All Island Champions in the under-13 and 15 age category from 1989 to 1991.

In 1991, the Isipathana under-15 school team toured Malaysia which was sponsored by Butani Exports. He remained as Vice-Captain of the team with Sunanda Fernando leading them which was coached jointly by Hyacinth Kumara and Sanath Asanjaya. In 1992, at the age of 17 years he donned the college first XV jersey while winning the All Island Schools Sevens tournament under Champika Nishantha's captaincy. That year was a unique one for Isipathana rugby becoming All Island Champions creating history winning 17 trophies in under- 13/15/17 and first XV rugby except for one loss in the under-17 sevens to Thomians. During his tenure with the senior team, he played along with some quality players like Miyuru Yuganthara, Jeehan Jayah, Piyum Prashantha few to be named where he played as a scrum half in his first XV rugby career.

In 1993, under the captaincy of Chamila Samantha they became League Champions and runners up in the knock out tournament, which apparently remained as the best period in his school rugby career. In the same year, in the match against Trinity at Longden Place Trinity were metres to touch down under the post leading 5/0 just three minutes before shattering their rivals hopes of win-the final whistle. Off a scrum in mid field, he picked the ball and hoodwinked the entire Trinity back division to score by the corner flag to draw the game 5-all to become the League Champions in 1993 which he rates as one of the unstinted performances in his rugby career. Along with this, he put up a belligerent performance in several matches representing his 'Alma Mater' including their annual big match at Longden Place. Their rivals Thurstan was leading 11-9 and off a scrum he received the pass to run solo covering 80

His club career ended up by rejoining CH in the 2006/07 season.

He got the National call in 1996 and played under Priyantha Ekanayake's captaincy and played in several tournaments. He was selected to tour Malaysia and in 2008 for the Quadrangular Tournament involving Japan, Korea, Hong Kong in Colombo. 17 years old he was selected to play in the junior national under-21 tour of Taiwan for the Mini World Cup Qualifiers under coaches S.W. Chang and Ananda Kasturiarachchi.

Refereeing has left much to be desired at Super League Tourney

ALTHAF NAWAZ The majority of the club owners of teams participating in the inaugural Super League Soccer Tournament have shown their displeasure over the standard of refereeing in the matches concluded so far, and are to write to the governing body to seek their intervention to resolve this issue. After the commencement of this semi-professional football league with the participation of ten top teams, most of the clubs are not happy over certain decisions taken by the local football referees, which they say had done immense damage to their performance and outcome of matches.

"We are very disappointed over the standard of refereeing so far. Most of the club owners are unhappy the way our local referees handled the games, which at times has changed the complexion of the matches. We have to find a quick remedy to overcome this situation, failing which we will have to face serious repercussions," said Rohitha Fernando, the owner of New Young SC from Wennappuwa, speaking to the media in a post-match press briefing last Sunday.

Rohitha, who is also Chairman of the Technical Committee, further elaborated:

"All clubs at the outset of the tournament requested the Football Federation to seek the assistance of few overseas referees in our region, like Japan, who are capable of supporting us, to mix with our local lads to gain the allimportant exposure, which up to now has received a negative response. Our best referees are sent for overseas assignments at a time a key tournament is in progress. As all are aware, the clubs have pumped in huge amounts which run up to several millions to focus on this tournament apart from the grant of Rs. three million given by the Football Federation, at a time when there are no sponsors due to the pandemic. We expect to play competitive soccer and let the team who performs best win the game. But our hopes are shattered with the present standard of refereeing which needs to be rectified sooner than later, if not the clubs will have to take a unanimous decision to pull out from this tournament," concluded Rohitha.

Daily News contacted A.G.C. Deshapriya, the Chairman of the Referees' Committee, for his comments, and he responded: "We know there had been lapses from some of the referees, but it is not severe as these clubs complain. We take up the complaints made by the clubs and refer them with video visuals along with these referees. We alert them to be cautious in their future assignments to minimize the mistakes. "We have segregated a pool of 40 referees for this event and had a workshop before the commencement of the tournament. As humans, they tend to make mistakes, which however is not an excuse. We are making all endeavours to improve the standard while the tournament progresses. The playing team should know to execute a proper plan to win their respective games, based on the strengths and weaknesses of their opponent," concluded Deshapri-

Morgan guides Kolkata to victory over Punjab

England Captain Eoin Morgan guided his Kolkata Knight Riders (KKR) to a five-wicket Indian Premier League (IPL) defeat of Punjab Kings in Ahmedabad on Monday.

Chasing 124 to win, Kolkata found themselves 17 for three before Morgan added 66 with Rahul Tripathi.

Though Tripathi fell for 41, Morgan was unbeaten on 47 when Kolkata completed victory with 3.2 overs to spare. Punjab had been restricted to 123 for nine by Krishna taking three for 30. The win gives Kolkata only their second victory in six games and lifts them from bottom of an excellent Kolkata bowling display, Prasidh

It also represents a return to form for Morgan, whose previous highest score in this year's tournament was 29 after a winter where he struggled to make an impact with the bat for England. Kolkata's fine bowling also included two for 31 from Australia paceman Pat Cummins. Punjab included England's Chris Jordan for the first time this season, with the Sussex man returning 0-24 from three overs.

He was introduced after Punjab made early inroads, including Ravi Bishnoi taking a superb diving catch at deep mid-wicket to remove Sunil Narine. But Morgan, in his 40-ball stay, steadied the chase in the company of Tripathi. Though Tripathi was caught at long-on and Andre Russell was run out, Morgan was joined by Dinesh Karthik to seal the win.

After sinking money into upgrading sports facilities, Okuizomo balked when it became clear it would have to provide bubble-like biosecurity measures with regular virus tests and medical care.

India's economy to contract as COVID-19 cases soar

India's economy may shrink in the current quarter as Covid-19 cases surge, but the country could recover in the next one, according to two economists. On Tuesday, India reported another 323,144 cases, bringing the country's cumulative infections to more than 17.6 million. That comes after the country reported five straight days of record new daily cases. Sonal Varma, India chief economist at Nomura, said the country is "clearly going to see a sequential growth hit" in its first quarter. India's fiscal year begins in April and ends in March the following year.

She predicts that gross domestic product will shrink around 1.5% in the current quarter, which ends in June. Varma added there is "downside risk" to this estimate.

While there have been fresh lockdowns or curfews in some states, cases remain high and more restrictions are expected, Varma told CNBC's "Street Signs Asia" on Tuesday.

"This is definitely going to impact activity in April and also in May," she said. (www.cnbc.com)

Housing prices soar by 20%

Lower interest rates have pushed the demand for housing loans up, resulting in housing prices soaring by over 20% from the 2Q 2020 level which is in stark contrast to apartment and land prices. Higher cost of construction triggered by the import controls may also be keeping the house prices buoyant.

Interest rate cuts help primary dealers

When the COVID pandemic engulfed global economies, Central Banks around the world almost universally, brought the interest rates down, ICRA Lanka Rating Agency said.

The Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL) also followed suit and reduced policy rates in seven steps between March and July last year. This had a major impact on market rates and asset prices creating opportunities and challenges to the various sectors of the economy.

During March last year, when the markets grappled with mounting uncertainty, investors sought refuge in the treasury assets propelling the prices up. Subsequent interest rate cuts also gave a nudge to the process.

This helped the primary dealers and banks to realize substantial capital gains as much as 40-to-60 percent from March 2020 price

This had a major impact on market rates and asset prices creating opportunities and challenges to the various sectors of the economy. Equities attracted a large number of local investors, as historically low interest rates on fixed income assets prompted them to seek alternative investments.

Declining yields on fixed deposits helped mutual funds industry's Asset Under Management (AUM) to grow exponentially to 97% by March this year making it one of the biggest winners from the current low interest rates. TO PAGE 18

Share of institutional time deposits have increased as low interest rates have driven retail depositors to higher yielding assets.

More risk averse depositors such as retirees have opted to stay put and lower real returns have undoubtedly affected their welfare level. Lower interest rates have pushed the demand for housing loans up, resulting in house prices soaring by over 20% from the 2Q 2020 level outpacing apartment and land prices. Large corporate and financial intuitions are showing growing interest in issuing debt instruments and locking up their funding needs at the current low interest rates.

Roughly Rs 117 billion debt instruments have been rated between 2Q 2020 to 1Q 2021 period. 2021 marks the highest amount of debt rated during the last five years. On the demand side, insurance companies and mutual funds stepping forward to buy these instruments increase their effective yields to attract investors from other asset classes.

TRIBUTE TO VASANTHA OBEYESEKERE

asantha Obeyesekere died in April four years ago. To my mind, Obeyesekere hasn't had a book written on his career in English, nor has there been any substantive essay written on his films. As a cine-phile I am of course thankful to those who presented him with honours due and deserved, but then I persist: to be fair by him, one must be fair by his work. Biographical sketches and superficial observations will get you only that far. I hope this essay, rudimentary though it is, will provoke others to follow.

Regi Siriwardena once wrote that popular cinema, far from yielding to myths and fantasies, could at times "subvert socially enforced discourses." As example he pointed at Dadayama. To class Dadayama under a category of films that dabbled in socio-political commentary while retaining elements of popular cinema is to say everything about Vasantha Obeyesekere in one go. That distils the man.

Popular cinema was always considered as an instrument of propaganda and myth-making. That is why, when a serious cinema emerged in Sri Lanka, directors tried not just to refrain from inserting any trace of commercial films but to do away with them to the extent where their films needed a new conception of the medium to be appreciated in their entirety.

What Vasantha Obeyesekere realised in his career was that the tropes rampant in mainstream cinema could be used to question both tradition and modernity. It is correct to consider his work unprecedented in this respect. Any discussion of his career must hence be centred on this: that is what distinguishes his films from those of other filmmakers.

Personal relations figure prominently in Obeyesekere's work. They do not survive for long: the idealism that marks them out at first are shattered, as time goes by, by external forces. These forces aren't always political, but they exist and persist. That doesn't just differentiate his work from his contemporaries, it also distinguishes his earlier and middle phases from his later phase (I will explore this shortly).

This came out very forcefully in his middle phase. Kusum in Palagetiyo is in love with Sarath, despite their obvious social gap (Sarath works for her father, a mudalali at a printing press). When he elopes with her to his house, Kusum's idealisation of marriage begins to crumble. Sarath's family do not take kindly to her high-bred notions of marriage life. When she realises the painful reality of what she's bought herself into, the film begins to take us into its tragic but inevitable finale.

Palagetiyo is not Obeyesekere's greatest film - that credit should be jointly shared by Dadayama and Kadapathaka Chaya – but it was nonetheless a landmark for its time. There's no better way of identifying both director and film than by contrasting him against both the "bourgeois idealists" and "bourgeois realists" among his contemporaries. That not only justifies the point that he wasn't overly concerned with the political. It also exemplifies him as an artist who never confused the personal with the political but knew how well the two could blend together.

Part of this must be attributed to Obeyesekere's approach to filmmaking. He scripted his own films, which allowed him to exercise near-complete control. Listen to some of the speeches in his films, and you'll come across sequences which temptingly indulge in melodrama, only to withdraw in time. They crop up again and again. one of the many motifs that bind his work together. These motifs could have only been birthed by the level of control he was able to impose on his

There are more subtle ways of identifying his agility in this regard. Take his dialogues and a sequence from one of his films to illustrate this. When Peter Gunawardena from Dorakada Marawa meets Priyantha, the man who's engaged to marry the woman Peter once loved, he states he has an important matter to discuss with him. ("What about?") Priyantha asks, to which Peter replies: "About Subashini". Both question and reply objectify Subashini, and from that point on that is how every other character views her: an object to ridicule and slander. That one line presages her crisis, but it's so subtle that it can be missed. Easily. Obeyesekere's genius was that he was adept at obtaining nuance of expression in his dialogues, and this comes through even in his weakest work. When he ventured into the political while trying to illuminate personal relations, Obeyesekere lost his touch. Here I'll look at one of his most politically coloured films, Maruthaya.

I can't really agree that Maruthaya showed an "uncanny ability to recapture onscreen the density of social specification." But that is how the authors of Profiling Sri Lankan Cinema puts it. By "density" what's probably being described is the way the film concentrates within itself the personal and economic crisis that its three protagonists face. There's "specification" here alright, enough and more.

But what I can't fathom or credit is how that crisis progresses from then on. Obeyesekere's penchant for eschewing narrative-chronology is apparent here as well, but that doesn't help untangle the ideological web it ensnares itself into. Neither the literally stagey scenes (where the three protagonists are illumined in a dark room, met by friends and acquaintances who abandon them then and there) nor the intensity of the dialogues and cutting helps, and in the end we're left with a void where metaphor and ideology collide so much that they almost become obtrusive. The formal "density" offers very little compensation for this. To hold Maruthaya superior to Diyamanthi, his only commercially-oriented work, is to my mind erroneous, but that's essentially what the book concedes ground to. Diyamanthi was coloured by contrivances that were part of our mainstream cinema at the time, yes. But it was a film that was refreshingly aware of its shortcomings, which at one point (after Vijaya Kumaratunga's character throws his "useless" Bachelor of Arts degree to the dustbin) yielded unapologetically to romanticism. Between this and Maruthaya hence, I prefer the former, if at all because it never tried to overreach itself.

Diyamanthi also precipitated Obeyesekere's mature phase, while presenting the obverse of the kind of films he'd make from then on. If his later films presented a clash between reality and fantasy to signify political comment, this one did so as cover for a Hitchcock-ian romantic thriller. After Palagetiyo we see two films that are his most perfectly conceived. I have unfortunately not seen Kadapathaka Chaya in a long time, so memory fails me. But I have gone to Dadayama again and again, and I am convinced that he intensified his outlook on personal relations in it. The actors he took in for both films must have helped of course, and to my mind no better actress than Swarna Mallawarachchi could have played the protagonists in them. In both these masterpieces, we see fantasy and reality cohabiting, and not always in obvious ways. Perhaps this is Hanthane Kathawa. Pairing the two of them with Sanath Gunatilake also offered irony: Gunatilake and Kumaratunga had by that time been paired as comic heroes in a series of popular films, which as Profiling Sri Lankan Cinema aptly suggests were comparable to some Hindi movies that dwelt on comedy and love. It is in here, and not in Maruthaya, that we see real "density". Multi-layered and ironic. But never obtrusive.

Moreover, with no real intermediary between script and direction, Obeyesekere would've been in a position to realise his vision intensely, a point driven home by his almost overwhelming use of quick cutting. Watch (for instance) the sequence of Mercy Edirisinghe's contortions of face and body juxtaposed with Kusum's and Sarath's love-making in Palagetiyo, or the final confrontation between Mallawarachchi and Randeniya in Dadayama, or the sequence of Mallawarachchi killing Kumaratunga in Kadapathaka Chaya.

The first sequence shows the agonised emotions of a woman beset with iealousy, who creates trouble for the couple and provokes their tragedy. The second sequence pits male chauvinism against one woman's powerful attempt at asserting her dignity. The third sequence is the obverse of this: the woman is able to assert dignity and vengeance, and she does this at the exact moment when the man (who has raped her continuously and is her brother in law) is "impotent" (he is recovering from a leg injury at the hospital). In these, dexterous editing aligning image to sound and emotion bears out Obeyesekere's savage view of personal relations, at once overwhelming and inevitable in their resolution.

What do we glean from all this? That for him, "the final measure of truth is both moral and social"? Yes, but I'd like to take out something more: that in the films of Vasantha Obeyesekere, if tradition is stifling, then the forced thwarting of it by modernity leads to total collapse and decay ("leaving only an empty shell behind"). One can argue that this reinforces traditionalist values, but it does not. To hold tradition inferior to modernity because of the retrogressive nature of the former is to ignore the acquisitive, ruthless character of the latter.

For me this dualism is best exemplified in Dadayama: it is tradition that condemns Rathmali when she is abandoned by Jayanath, but it is the same representatives of tradition that egg her on to fall for him and possibly marry him. In Obeyesekere's universe the moral and the social are "two sides of the same coin", and so (it would seem) are tradition and modernity, both resembling one another in terms of their predatory, male-oriented base. That goes a long way in establishing this extraordinary artist in our country as filmmaker and visionary.

Dadayama

an abstract statement, so let's examine a sequence from Dadayama, where the antagonist Priyankara Jayanath (Ravindra Randeniya) visits Rathmali (Mallawarachchi) with his "mother" (Irangani Serasinghe). When I interviewed Serasinghe, I put to her that this immediately reinforced in our minds the image of her as the ideal(ised) mother-figure.

Those who have seen the film will no doubt remember what happens next: the "mother" turns out to be a brothel owner, whose role in the film is to trick Rathmali into an embarrassing situation, so as to destroy her credibility should ever she file a case against Jayanath. I told Serasinghe that this in effect ruined her credibility as the ideal mother-figure, which went by way of emphasising the rift between romanticism and realism. She laughed and agreed.

The same can be said of Kadapathaka Chaya. Pairing Mallawarachchi with Vijaya Kumaratunga was ironic: Vijaya's first onscreen role was as her lover in

110TH DEATH ANNIVERSARY OF VENERABLE HIKKADUWE SRI SUMANGALA THERA

A BEACON OF LIGHT IN A BYGONE DARK ERA

Professor ANANDA ABEYSIRIWARDENA

■ he 110th death anniversary of Tripitaka Vagishwaracharya Hikkaduwe Sri Sumangala Maha Thera the founder of the Vidyodaya Pirivena - who carved a niche in the annals of Buddhist revivalism in Ceylon through his deep scholarship, vas intellect and as a guiding light for a long line of pupils heralded a new era - falls on April 29.

The 17th century was a dark era of Buddhism where later Welivita Sri Sangaraaja Thera's indispensable role and his name in the latter era is etched in gold in resuscitating the lost decline. His erudite pupils that moved hither and hither of the country rejuvenated the lost religious and intellectual scholarship which inevitably resulted in regaining the lost enthusiasm. But one could foresee that there was a void and the indispensable requirement of the intellect of repute in these religious and intellectual spheres. It was a boon to Ceylon that Hikkaduwe Sri Sumangala Thera who was ingrained in Bodhisattva qualities could aptly fill up this void as the tower of strength.

Ordaining

He was born in 1827 in Hikkaduwa belonged to a caste with the lay name of Don Nicolas Abeyweera Goonewardena and was ordained as a monk in 1840 on the Telwatte Wijayaba Maha Pirivena a 'Hikkaduwe Sumangala'. The young monk had vistas of opportunity of learning under Walane Sri Siddartha of Paramadhamma Chethiya Pirivena of Ratmalana who was the leading authority and resonance accounted the monk of the times. The young monk Sumangala was conferred the ordination of Upasampada at the Malwatta Vihara of Kandy. Apart from this, he leant Sanskrit, under the Batuwantudawe Pandit and from the Kachinatha Vidyalankara Pandit. He also cultivated English, Arithmatics and other languages from various other teachers.

Young Venerable Hikkaduwe Sumangala Thera with the guidance of his teachers cultivated a remarkable position. He also became an erudite in Sinhala, Pali, Sanskrit and Prakrit languages grammar, astrology and history and an accomplished author of these fields. The Mahawansa edited together with Batuwantudawe Pandit became a renowned work. His facile pen wrote Sidat Sagara Sannaya, Balavathara, Brahma Kavya Sannaya and Kavyasekara. His masterly unsurpassable works were Warna Reethiya, Masarthu Lakshakaya, Sathya Sangrahaya, Sandi Vigrahaya, Seema Vibhagaya and Akyatha

excellence. He devoted his whole life to intellectual scholarly pursuits which were his forte. He played a pivotal role in establishing Lankopakaraya Press and starting Lankaloka Samaya Magazine and the Sarasavi Sandaresa Newspa-

Debates

Hikkaduwe Sumangala Nayaka Thera was not only instrumental in writing works of dhamma he also took part in intellectual debates. These debates were of languages and literary subjects. Among them were Savusathdam debate, Panadura debate, linguistic debate, Parupana debate and AdiMasa debate. It is recorded in history that all these debates were in pursuance of truth. The Venerable Thera never took part in them only to gain victory until the truth was realized he aspired to make them realize the same. His skills of debate, logical presentation, rapier thrust, incised rhetoric, razor-sharp intellect fearlessness were compact of indomitable innate qualities, which made him refuse to lead to cross swords against his formidable opponents.

He managed to build up a large circle of pupils. Among them were Kojin Gunaratne, Kojima Kondagngna and Sumana Tavubana priests and erudite Pandit named Sato from Japan, Rev. Kosambika Dhammananda, Pandith Sathischandra Vidya Vibhushana from Bharatha, two Chittagong Buddhist Bhikkus Bewaradasa and Hara Govinda, N. K. Bhagavat and Visharada Gnanananda Bhikkhu from Gujarat. From the Mysoordesa Pandit Nithyananda Goswami. Two who hail from were Siam Vukum Amarabhirakkita and Pramaha Kantachara and from Tibet, Subahu were well-known among them. Kosambika Dhammananda and Sathischandra Vidyabhushana were reputed as students who excelled from Venerable Thera among his local students Heiyyantuduwe Sri Dewamithra Nayaka Thera, Mahagoda Sri Gnaneshwara Nayaka Thera, Bihalpola Sri Dewarakshita, Kahawe Sri Ratanasara, Baddegama Sri Ayaratana were acclaimed as prominent pupils. Apart from those pupils, Pandit Paul Darlke the German Scholar Pandit who posed queries from the Sumangala MahaNahimi on the philosophy of Mahayana his authoritative scholarly eminence were widely accepted. #### Vidyodaya Pirivena

In 1867 Hikkaduwe Sumangla Thera played a prominent Buddhist revivalist role in Dhamma Sangayanawa in Pelmadulla. In 1873 he was instrumental in establishing the Vidyodaya Pirivena of Maligakanda the prominent Oriental seat of learning of Dhamma. This institution led a pioneering role in preserving national heritage for posterity. The Vidyodaya Pirivena institution played a pivotal role in rejuvenating the indolent Sinhalese with the fresh mode of thoughts that infused a new lease of life in every nook and corner of the country. Predominantly the MahaNahimi elevated the level of the mother tongue Sinhalese. Vidyodaya became the seat of learning for oriental scholars who learnt their languages, writers with articulate pens Sinhalese and which brought a promising future to the country. Also for the Ayurvedha and traditional medicine in medical fields and astrology, this institution rendered a remarkable service that entwined scholar-

The other invaluable facet was Vidyodaya became the mother institution that was destined to nurture Ceylon as the cradle of oriental learning for a large circle of pirivenas in all parts of the country. Therefore, it is our prime duty to protect the future of the Vidyodaya Pirivena as devout

Timeless visions of Dr Adikaram

ne of the well known and well-loved persons who lived when we were growing up hap-pened to be Dr Edward Winifred Adikaram (1905 – 1985). He was one of the rarest multi-dimensional erudites to be born in our country. He was a well-known teacher, and prophet who declared certain rare visions for the masses. He was a researcher, scientist and writer of a rare calibre, a lexicographer and broadcaster who possessed a rare talent in clear expression.

I knew him for the most part as a writer and a broadcaster. As I saw him in my formative stages of the profession, he was well prepared with the wanted material that went into the making of a sound broadcaster.

The compendium of visionary documents that Dr Adikaram wrote during his lifetime is now collected and translated into English. Titled Onwards Along like a Unicorn, the book contains sixty documents translated from Sitivili pamphlets Sinhala by Ravi Palihawadana. These notes have been read over the years by discerning scholars of varying types. The volume is prefaced by three topical documents written by three eminent university professors known to Dr Adikaram.

Resourceful episodes

One is Professor JB Disanayaka who provides the intimate link that existed in his life with Dr Adikaram. The second significant profile of facts pertaining to the life and works of Dr Adikaram is written by Professor Mahinda Palihawadana. This profile provides quite a number of resourceful episodes in the visionary's life. Professor Palihawadana, in his document, leaves no stone unturned to prove the high calibre of a person and the qualities possessed by Dr Adikaram in his contribution to the nation. The third is a radio interview conducted by Professor Tissa Kariyawasam, a document in a series of broadcasts on 'Our Heroes'. This is a rare document for those seeking insights into the changing aspects of the sound medium.

At a particular moment Dr Adikaram says, referring to a question on his own contributions:

"I don't know of any outstanding achievements of mine. I am an ordinary person and this may have been some results of whatever work I had done during various periods of my life. But whatever you may consider, I don't regard what I have done as of much use. If there was some use, it was mostly from what I haven't done, rather than from what I have done.'

Having reread some of these documents both on Sinhala and English, I sincerely felt that a genuine attempt of this calibre so far has not come out on this form of a learned research project. This too goes to say the shortcomings in the sphere of research. Extant in our higher education programmes. These essays in this form of both creative and visionary bring to the mind that Dr Adikaram may have had an awakened mind linked to both materialism as well as spiritualism. One of the superb pieces one would find in this collection is titled A Mother's Love.

Creative communication

I have read this eye-opening piece in Sinhala and used it as one of my teaching materials at the university level of teaching creative communication. I feel that this is a visionary document that should be included in school readers all around the world. In order to express what it means by maternal love.

Dr Adikaram utilizes an Italian folktale that goes as follows:

"A mother, who brought up her son with much love, arranged a marriage for him at a suitable age. In time, the daughter in law fell out with the mother and hatched a cruel plan to get rid of her. One day, she insisted that if the mother isn't killed and her heart brought to her that she would commit suicide. The husband, who had fallen under the wife's spell, killed the mother, split open her chest and took her heart out. While taking the mother's heart to his wife, he slipped on the blood and fell. Right away, the heart inquired: "Son did you hurt yourself?'

This spiritual tale, as I see, rests on several layers of meanings surpassing the mere barriers cultural milieu.

Similarly, there are several other visionary writings of Dr Adikaram that need our attention. The highly penetrative essay titled in Sinhala 'Kalakarava' is translated into English as 'Who is a true artist?'

In this creative cum spiritual essay, Dr Adikaram underlines some of the salient factors that go into the making of a sensitive artiste who grasps the essence of living conditions by way of extrasensory thought streams linked to day to day life. The essay too shows the extent to which Dr Adikaram has taken the concept of beauty and creative skill as living entities.

Original documents

I have used this essay in my teaching process as well as creative communication workshops. I feel that the work as a whole is a genuine contribution to the present generation of all types of communication scholars and researchers in social sciences and humanities. The volume too paves the way to know when and where the original documents come from. They are lined up in the publishing history. This volume I feel needs a serious dis-

I used to meet Dr Adikaram at his Pagoda Road residence. At that time, I was a smoker. As I entered, I saw him seated in the lounge. I threw the cigarette butt and approached him. On the spur of the moment, he told me: "Why did you stop enjoying this habit at this particular moment? You may perhaps think it over twice. Ask yourself the question: Why did I

The following day, I gave up smoking. The last time I saw him was in Dr Leel Gunasekara's office over a research project.

When I checked with him about his health, he told me softly: "Sunanda, my eyes are giving me trouble. I can't do much

I silently listened to him. I felt later:

Did he not give us the eye of inspiration? The eye of innovation and the eye of investigation?

SCULPTURED MOVES

Dr SUBASHINI PATHMANATHAN

ll the dance aspects are well depicted in the solid static sculptural representations. Indian sculptors produced excellent Hindu temple icons with a perfect theoretical foundation with well-established traditional codes and norms. The sculptors who produced the sculptures were very much impressed by the aesthetic essence of temple dances. The majority of the Indian dances are deeply rooted in Hinduism. Most of the Indian temple dances originated in Hindu temples.

The sculptors before they created their Hindu artefacts studied the Hindu Agama Sastra (established principles or codes of Hinduism) Silpa Sastra (defined traditional codes established by the theoretical concepts of sculptures) and Natya Sastra (Indian Aesthetic theory), well established theoretical traditions and principles related to dance and other dance-related art forms). Similarly, the Vasu Shastra deals with the science or Sastra of architecture. Silpa Sastra provides guidelines for forming or creating statues, icons and stone murals.

The beauty of the dance and its aesthetic essence attracted and influenced the minds of sculptors and painters. The dancing sculptures provided an aesthetic link between the dance and the sculpture by combined corporeality as a meeting point. The dance originated before sculptures. The dance poses influenced the minds of sculptors. Different nuances of dance including the stances (Ishana position), hand gestures and limb positions influenced the minds of sculptors. Further, these were the guiding and driving factors for the creation of devotional iconography and decorative architectural sculptures. Further, the sculptures are divided into two main categories. One is the Hindu temple icons and the other is the decorative sculptures.

Plenty of bronze and stone sculptures were discovered from the Indu valley civilization. This is considered one of the earliest forms of sculptures in the world. With the passage of time, Hinduism, Buddhism and Jainism produced excellent bronze sculptures to the world. Some of the sculptures of ancient India were carved on solid blocks. The sculptures were considered as some of the largest and beautiful sculptures in the world.

India had a history of sculptural tradition and it proves the excellent mastery of its iconography. Some of the dance sculptures discovered from the Indian sub-continent of the Indu Valley civilization is excellent. One dance stone statute of Harappa is considered one of the oldest dance sculptures in the Hindu valley civilization. The period of the sculpture is estimated to be the period between 3000 to 2000 BC. Similarly, another dance sculpture was discovered from Mohenjo-Daro (2000-1500 BC). Another torso sculpture of Harappa was identified by a famous scholar as the prototype of the dancing image of Lord Nataraja. Later the image served as a specimen dance image for the researchers to identify the affinity with the South Indian bronze sculptures.

One ancient Mohenja-Daro female dancing sculpture was depicted with proper tripanga dance posture with a well-defined appropriate dance hand gesture. Periodically different varieties of dance sculptures were recovered by archaeologists and researchers from numerous locations of the Indian sub-continent. In the Indian dance research study, the dance sculptures of South Indian temples occupy a pre-eminent position. This dance research study could be approached from two different angles. One is based on the study of iconography pioneered by Ananda K Coomaraswamy and the other is on the research study of Karana dance sculptures of Hindu temples. The iconography does not mean an art form. It is a presentation of images that correspond to the ideas originally in the mind of the artist. Iconography dance images are especially in the form of sculptural representation. It is a reflection of the best or worst to any natural model. It is in imitation and imaginative creativity of angelic works of art (Silpa).

Dr Ananda K Coomaraswamy in 1912 made a valuable contribution to dance and sculptures. He also had done a dance research study with numerous other fine arts representations and the dances of Lord Siva. He investigated the divine manifestation of the deity's dance with the iconographical interpretation. Following Ananda K. Coomaraswamy some more researchers have also carried out a similar type of research on dance and sculptures and dance-related sculptures. The research on frozen static temple based Karana sculptures of dance were further carried out by a few more outstanding scholars.

In the Indian sculptural research study, the period of the sculptures was divided into three different periods. They are the first period, second period and third period. A variety of ancient Lord Nataraja sculptures and different decorative Ganas (Goblins) sculptures were discovered from numerous locations of the Indian sub-continent during the first period. The majority of Lord Nataraja statues belonged to the first period. The Gana sculptures (Goblins figures) were also found all over the ancient archaeological and ancient temple sites of India. Different postures of Ganas (Goblins) sculptures resemble typical dance rhythmic limb movements and body positions.

All the Gana sculptures of India were depicted with a rhythmic vibrancy of dance. According to some of the researchers, at the end of the second and third periods, very few images of Lord Nataraja were produced, but during these two periods, an ample variety of dancing sculptures were produced. Indian sculptures discovered from different areas belong to various ages. The documentary interpretations of dance and dance-related studies are elaborately given in numerous texts especially in the Natya Sastra (Indian Aesthetic theory. The ancient sculptures of India propagate the dance with beautiful dance nuances through sculptural representation.

BM MUKTHAR

veryone has an ambition in life with regard to their future. Only if they work hard, can they succeed. "My childhood dream to be a pilot has become a reality now and this became possible because I bravely confronted whatever challenges I faced in my journey towards this dream," the first Muslim pilot in the Kalutara district Sahidh has said.

One must not give up ambition for twists and turns in life, he added. We must reach our destination. We shall perform aggressively. It's a lesson. The Daily News encountered Sahidh Amjadh who shares his experiences.

Q: What inspired you to become a pilot?

A: During my childhood, I went to Mecca on a pilgrimage with my parents. From that moment onwards I had a deep wish to become a pilot. My ambition of becoming a pilot established afterwards.

Q: Certainly many obstacles must have stood in your path. Would you like to share some with us?

A: I was born on July 23, 1996, in Beruwela, Chinafort as the eldest son to Amjadh and Raina. I received my early education up to Grade 5 at CWW Kannangkara MMV, Mathugama. Later I joined Holy Cross College, Kalutara, to pursue my higher studies. It was here I laid the foundation for my journey of ambition.

I joined the Cosmos Pilot Training School in Ratmalana. From 2013 to 2014, I completed the one-year training course. After that, I travelled to Canada in order to follow a training programme where I obtained a commercial pilot license. I was trained at Brampton Flight Centre from 2014 to 2016 and obtained the required certificate.

Q: You also serve as a trainer for pilots.

A: I received an opportunity to work as an instructor for trainee pilots for a period of two years from 2017 to 2018 at Moncton Flying College, Canada. This helped me a lot to develop myself in this field.

Q: When did you get an opportunity to fly professionally?

A: I started my career in April and turns in life 1-7 2018 as a pilot officer at Ivas Air, Canada, to transport passengers between domestic airports. Accordingly, I worked as a pilot to transport domestic passengers and cargo for a period of one and a half vears in the eastern Atlantic region of Canada. It was during this period that I was elevated to Captaincy from the post of First Officer Pilot at the same organization. In 2020, I got an opportunity to serve as a First Officer of a large Boeing 737 flight belongs to a new firm call Swoop. This flight carries on 189 passengers with cargo.

Q: What is the difference between a captain and a first of-

A: Usually there are two pilots in a flight. The captain is the first rank position. The First Officer serves as an assistant. A flight is operated by these two officers. The pilot hands over his duty to the assistant in a situation such as performing prayers. They perform their duties in cooperation and understanding.

Q: Have you worked only in domestic airports in Canada?

A: Not at all. I have discharged my duties as a pilot in Boeing 737 flights en route to its overseas destinations such as the USA, Cuba, Mexico and Jamaica.

Q: Have you been provided with a vacation?

A: We worked only 15 days a month. We used to stay sometimes six to seven days at the above destinations. During holidays we used to go on picnics to foreign countries with friends. For this purpose, we had been provided with a light class aircraft with boundary restrictions on a concessionary basis.

Q: Are you on holidays these days?

A: Well not exactly.

But due to this pandemic situation, flight operations of our organization have been cancelled. We have been provided with a vacation. When the situation turns back to normal, the flight operations resume. Then I may have to report.

O: Any remarkable incidents

you encountered while on duty? A: When I was working as a captain in a passenger aircraft, I was flying to a domestic airport. At that time our flight was approximately 74,000 feet above. There, my co-pilot noticed a minor oil leakage in the right side oil tank. I immediately contacted the control tower. I got permission for an emergency landing at a nearby airport. As instructed, I landed the flight safely. Then I had a sigh of relief as we came out of danger. I could observe emergency arrangements such as fire extinguishers and first aid had been kept ready while landing.

Q: Are you satisfied with your

A: Exactly. It was my childhood dream, wasn't it? Also, I should mention to you the other side of the coin. I'm forced to leave behind my family, home, relatives and country. This is the bitter truth about this profession. I am deeply worried about my inability to take part in family affairs.

O: Anything more to add about your profession?

A: While studying, naturally the students take interest in high-tech jobs of this nature. They should make efforts to succeed. I strongly believe that they need a certain amount of devotion. There will be obstacles in the way. But if they properly manage these hardships, surely they would be able to reach the winning post easily.

I aim to become a chief pilot, which is the highest-ranking position in my organization. In order to achieve this goal in future, I perform my duties with utmost care. Once a task is accomplished, I should shift to another. This attitude brings results.

Project Title: Requirement Gathering and Risk Assessment of Government Organizations Maintaining Critical Information Infrastructure (CERT/GOSL/CON/ QCBS/2021/01)

Sri Lanka Computer Emergency Readiness Team (Sri Lanka CERT|CC), an agency under the Ministry of Digital Infrastructure and Information Technology is mandated to protect Information Technology users and digital government infrastructure, and to provide up-to-date Information and cyber security awareness, trainings and information on potential threats and vulnerabilities to Sri Lankan citizens.

Sri Lanka has shown great strides in technological progression over the past decade in developing various digital government initiatives by investing in digital assets that allow them to take advantage of emerging technology. The applications and infrastructure are utilized by public organizations with the aim of increasing the organizational efficiency thereby providing better services for citizens.

As the reliance on digital initiatives increase, the information security risks faced by the government organizations surge substantially as they are subjected to various information and cyber threats on an ongoing basis, which can cause significant disruptions to the public service delivery thereby destroying public confidence based on the risk exposure, severity and the impact.

It is, therefore, essential to adopt an appropriate methodology in terms of identifying, measuring and managing the risk faced by the government organizations to ensure security and maintenance of critical information infrastructure. To implement this strategy, Sri Lanka CERT aims to obtain a service of an experienced and qualified consultancy firm to perform a comprehensive information security risk assessment of the government organizations maintaining critical information infrastructure.
